PLAN THAW RESCUE

HARRY THAW'S GUARDIAN ANGEL

Mrs. George Carnegie and her husband. The former, who was Margaret Thaw and a sister of the fugitive, has been the leader in her brother's battles for freedom ever since he was sent to Matteawan. She has been ably assisted by her husband.

Senator Warren Fights Free Wool

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—When the tariff bill was taken up for consideration in the Senate today, Senator Warren of Wyoming said:

"Shall we crush out our sheep growers with a free trade policy, and when they have ceased their efforts and engaged in other pursuits, shall we depend upon foreign shipments of frozen meat at terrapin and canvas back prices?"

He added that the pledges of Wilson and the Democratic party to the effect that no legitimate industry would be destroyed by tariff reduction were being violated in the case of wool.

J. R. Garfield Visits Progressives Here

James R. Garfield, the Progressive leader, and Secretary of the Interior under President Roosevelt, visited the Boston Progressive headquarters today. He said: "I have made a careful study of the political situation in the States of Maine, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, and from my observations, I am of the impression that the Progressive strength is on the increase. I have found little or no sentiment for an amalgamation with the Republicans."

Malden's Street Head Is Removed

A sensation has been caused in Malden by the removal today of Clarence T. Perkins as superintendent of streets. September 1 is given as the date for the office to be vacated. Criticism of the work done on the highways is given as the cause of the action of the street and water commission. Two commissioners, John M. Devir and Edmund Lonergan, voted to remove Superintendent Perkins, while Chairman Charles T. Hall voted to retain him.

Seals by Hundreds in Bay off Duxbury

DUXBURY, Aug. 22.—The bay between here and Plymouth is thickly populated with seals. Several hundred can be seen sunning themselves on the flats around Clark's Island, Saquish and on the Standish shore. Fishermen are worried by the seal invasion of South Shore waters this Summer. They are devouring mackerel and herring and driving off the schools.

Albert DeMerritt Dead by Bullet

DURHAM, N. H., Aug. 22.—Representative Albert DeMerritt, one of the State's best-known men, was found dead in a pasture near here today with a bullet in his head and a shotgun beside him. Circumstances point strongly to suicide.

He left home at 5 a. m. and his body was discovered a few hours later. He is survived by a widow, one son and two daughters.

FOSS QUITS DEMOCRATS

Morgan Rake-Off Attacked

BETRAYED BY PARTY LEADERS

FOSS

Governor Foss today declared that the Democratic party had betrayed him and his principles and that he was through with the Democratic leaders until they "get back to the people."

It is the most important statement yet issued by the Governor. He declined to state whether he would be a candidate on an independent ticket.

Here are the Governor's latest utterances on the political situation:

I have taken no position which warrants any one to draw a conclusion that I have absolutely entered the Republican party. When I used the term "Fellow-Republicans" at the Essex Republican club outing I added, "If you don't believe it, ask Tom Riley." That showed that I meant it as a mere pleasantry.

I round not go with the Republicans unless they changed to my position. I am satisfied that they have not so changed.

I have never deceived the people as to my position. The politicians may have been deceived, but I have been true to the people.

My logical position now is that of an independent.

Q. Does that mean, governor, that you will be a candidate for reelection on an independent ticket?

That depends. Isn't this nice weather? We shouldn't discuss politics in such beautiful weather. It's too nice a day.

I put into the Democratic platform last year, and it was indorsed, my position on the railroad and the western trolleys' measures, and this year, as I am informed, the chairman and the secretary of the Democratic State Committee came up here and lobbied against my principles, and the Democratic members of the Legislature refused to support me or the measure which I advocated.

Under such circumstances I told them some time ago that I could not go with them longer. Just as long as they are with the people I am with them. But they have taken a stand that is not with the people.

NEW HAVEN BOND PLAN IS FLAYED

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 22.—Governor Morgan G. Bulkeley of Hartford, Ct., at the meeting of the New Haven road stockholders this afternoon fiercely attacked the management and directors of the road, and especially the financial policy in a stirring address. He called the financial policy wild and extravagant and doubted the legality of the scheme to underwrite the $67,000,000 convertible bonds through the agency of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Ex-Governor Bulkeley arose to object while the vote on the issuance of the stock was being taken and inquired if the contracts for the underwriting had been signed. With some difficulty he brought out the fact that the executive committee of the board of directors had completed the contract with J. P. Morgan & Co., by which they receive two and one half per cent commission, but that the full board of directors had not voted upon it.

When this information had been obtained Mr. Bulkley continued saying in part:

Regardless of the fact that this issue of bonds is to be given to the stockholders as the stockholders we are confronted today with contracts purporting to have been made by the executive committee by which one of its number shall receive $1,600,000 commission. These contracts were made before the bond issue was authorized here. I speak representing a large stock interest and a larger bond interest, and I say this is a wild and extravagant plea to pay over a million and a half dollars to a member of the executive committee or his firm for what could be done by the treasury department of our own company without the intervention of any Wall Street commission.

Six Per Cent. Enough.

Six per cent. interest is a large enough temptation for the stock and bond holders of the New Haven road. It is large enough for the general public, and it is not necessary to hock around Wall street perfectly good securities of a perfectly good railroad.

These securities should be offered to the stock and bond holders without the intervention of any underwriting syndicate.

Prison No Terror to Rev. W. F. Davis

Explains Desire to Serve for Julian Hawthorne.

"Prison walls have no terrors for me. I am ready to go to jail today to secure the release of my classmates, Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton," declared Rev. William F. Davis, an evangelist. living with his wife at No. 100 Garland street, Everett.

"I haven't seen Hawthorne or Dr. Morton since we graduated back in 1887, but I stand ready to add their two unexpired terms together and to serve them out. They are men who will be of great use to their fellowmen. My days of usefulness are drawing to a close. The Bible tells us to make substitution of sacrifices. That is what I am offering to do."

"Neighbor" Davis, in the early eighties, preached on Boston Common in the face of an ordinance forbidding preaching without a permit. He served a year in 1887 and 1888 and later terms in Charles Street Jail for similar charges.

Ask Court Ruling on Mayor's Powers

The Supreme Court was today asked to determine the exact power vested in a Mayor under the charter form of city government, in the suit brought by Hugh McLean to compel Mayor White of Holyoke to approve a school contract for $1,885 awarded to McLean's company. The sum was not provided for in a $22,000 appropriation and Mayor White refused to approve it. The school committee awarded McLean the contract over the Mayor's veto.

SUSPECT LEISH AS LEADER OF PLOT

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 22.—There is a new mystery in the Thaw case. The mystery is: "Who is George S. Leish?"

Leish—or McLeish, as he is sometimes called—came to Sherbrooke with Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie. He said he came from New York. But a Montreal man here today said that he has seen Leish in Montreal a great deal, and that the man is connected with the theatrical profession.

The report is that Leish is a Canadian, who knows every foot of the country around here, and that actually he is managing Thw's fight here. If there is a rescue party Leish is looked on to head it.

Leish is with Mr. Von Hoffman, Thaw's friend, all the time—

rides around with him daily. He is in touch with Mr. Carnegie by telegraph constantly.

Leslie's movements are held responsible in part for the statement that there is a plan afoot to kidnap Thaw before the immigration authorities can take him in custody.

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 22.—Harry K. Thaw will be shot if he tries to break jail here and no will any assisting him.

So many rumors of attempts to deliver Thaw from jail cropped out today and to persistent were these reports, that Gerrhor LooFee decided to take no chances.

The Governor feels that desperate people are behind Thaw, and that his freedom is desired at any cost.

Hearing these reports, the Governor redoubled his vigilance.

Today the jail guards were instructed to shoot Thaw if he tries to escape. Other guards were also instructed to shoot any person attempting to aid Thaw in escaping.

Armed Guard Enrages Thaw.

Thaw's declaration that he is tempted to become a British subject has been followed by the suggestion by some of his counsel that he buy property in Canada and take steps toward naturalization. This, it was held, would settle all danger of his deportation.

The cordon of armed guards enrage Thaw.

He has chafed under the restraint of confinement—having tasted a bit of freedom in his wild dash from Matteawan and up through New England.

The addition of armed guards angers Thaw as being not only a reflection upon his reliability, but another and stronger grip of the arm hand of the law.

"Ridiculous!" the prisoner cried, when he looked out of the windows and saw the guards. "Do they think I'm going to batter my way through those thick walls?"

"All foolishness! They are mistaken if they have any such idea, or if they think I am going to harm myself. Do people think I would be fighting so hard for my just freedom if I were thinking of suicide."

Governor La Force was entirely unmoved by Thaw's outburst, and the guards are still on duty.

"If he gets out of here, he'll be a good one," said the Governor.

Thaw is prepared to spend $50,000 for his freedom. His family has promised him funds in any amount.

May Drop Habeas Corpus.

Upon the return from Ottawa today of W. L. Shurtleff, one of the leading counsellors for Thaw, it was strongly intimated that the habeas corpus proceedings would be dropped and the question of proving Thaw an insane and undesirable alien would be put squarely up to the Dominion government.

"Prove Thaw insane or turn him loose," is the attitude of the Thaw lawyers.

Dr. Britton G. Evans, the alienist who left for New York today, also intimated that the Canadian government would be asked to turn Thaw loose or else prove that he is crazy. A cablegram may be sent to the Governor-General, the Duke of Connaught, asking him to interfere if it begins to appear that Thaw will be sent back to New York. The case will be fought all the way to King George, and Thaw has enough money to carry it through indefinitely.

Meanwhile Thaw sat in the St. Francis jail bombarding various official circles in the United States, demanding that they come to his aid.

Having won a big victory in getting arguments on his habeas corpus writ postponed until Wednesday, Thaw was in a hopeful frame of mind and said he thought that either the United States government or the government of Pennsylvania would eventually come to his aid. He charged that he is the victim of a conspiracy which he hopes soon to reveal.

The feature of today in the Thaw case was the hearing of "Educated Roger" Thompson, the New York chauffeur, who drove the automobile in which Thaw fled from Matteawan.

Thompson was arrested in the Superior Court room here on the charge of aiding and abetting an undesirable alien to enter the country. The penalty for his offense is a fine of from $50 to $500. There is no prison term attached.

The position taken by Thompson is that he cannot be tried until it is definitely established that Thaw is an undesirable alien.

"I believe that Thaw will be liberated and guaranteed full rights as a citizen," declared Thompson. "In that case, how could I be held for accompanying him into this country?"

Thaw has taken additional hope from an editorial in the Sherbrooke Record demanding "English Fair Play" for him.

"That is the proper spirit," cried Thaw delightedly, when shown a copy of the paper. "I know I will get fair play here, and that is something I never got in New York. Never was mortal man treated worse than I was. They conspired against me to keep me in an insane asylum, which was worse than being in a prison. I know that the people of Canada have only kindly feelings for me, in fact I am tempted to become a resident of this country if I can establish my civic rights here."

Best Legal Minds in Two Countries Hired to Save Thaw

Thirteen lawyers—the greatest array of legal talent ever engaged to defend a single prisoner—are at work to keep Harry K. Thaw from being returned to Matteawan asylum from which he escaped last Sunday morning. The list includes some of the keenest minds at law in the United States and Canada. Here it is:

W. M. Olmstead of New York.
J. D. Greenshields, New York.
Former Governor William A. Stone, Pennsylvania.
Former District Attorney Blakeslee, Pittsburgh.
W. K. McKeown, K. C., Montreal.
David T. Watson, New York.
J. D. McEvoy.
Emile Rioux, former Crown Prosecutor.
M. K. LaFlamme, K. C.

not come here. Harry feels sorry for her. She is still his wife, but Evelyn can take care of herself and she doesn't want any affection from her husband."

Thaw "Jollies" Sheriff.

Sheriff Frederick Horsbeck of Dutchess County, New York, who came here with District Attorney E. A. Conger of the same county to take Thaw on a conspiracy warrant and land him back in Matteawan, planned to leave for home this afternoon.

"I cannot do any good with my hands tied," said Hornbeck. "It is a certainty that Thaw will be deported. The only thing now is: Where will he be deported from?"

If the board of inquiry of the immigration department sits at Coaticook, he will be sent into Vermont or New Hampshire.

Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn of New York State is trying to have Thaw deported into New York. Nothing will be done, according to present indications, until next week.

When Hornbeck went in to say goodbye to Thaw the fugitive's face was wreathed in smiles.

"This is the time I beat you, sheriff," cried Thaw delightedly.

C. G. Greene and D. Nevers of the Department of Immigration have gone to Coaticook and Hermenegilde De Garford, where they are investigating the details of Thaw's arrival in Canada from the States.

CLASH BETWEEN AUTHORITIES OVER CUSTODY OF THAW

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 22.—The Dominion authorities and the local courts have come to an open fight over Thaw.

Minister of Justice C. J. Doherty precipitated this fight by ordering Sheriff Henry Aylmer to deliver Thaw into the custody of Inspectors Thomas H. Whitins and H. D. Reynolds, for deportation.

Sheriff Aylmer, after a conference with Judge Globensky and Judge Lynch, refused point-blank to obey the order.

Jailer La Force said:

"We shall positively hold Thaw until the present court proceedings are concluded, and until we get an order from Justice Globensky for his disposition.

"I will not turn Harry Thaw over to any one even then, till I have been thoroughly advised who should receive him."

The immigration inspectors expected today to make a formal demand for the prisoner. Jailer La Force prepared to refuse this demand, and to resist it by force if necessary.

Jail Delivery Rumored.

The rumors of an attempt to rescue Thaw from jail, which were evidently caused, according to Jailer La Force, by a misunderstanding of orders relative to the serving of the writ of habeas corpus, and several telephone messages he received in regard to it, have forced the authorities to take stringent measures to protect the prisoner.

Armed guards patrolled all night beneath the window of Thaw's cell, and high powered automobiles were ready outside the jail to take up the chase should Thaw escape and try to get away.

Sheriff Hornbeck of New York declared:

"We are taking no chances. There's only a flimsy bar and a short jump between Thaw and liberty, even without bail."

George Lauder Carnegie, and his wife, Margaret Thaw Carnegie, have left Sherbrooke, full of determination.

In a striking interview, Carnegie declared that the entire resources of the family were at Harry's disposal. He asserted that his family and the entire world knows that Thaw could not get a fair test of his sanity in New York State. He promised that the man who aided the flight from Matteawan would be defended to the last ditch.

"Harry will strike hard," he said, "at the plan to reject him as an insane alien. He expects to prove here and now that he is sane."

Meanwhile, Harry Thaw is rejoicing today over the report that his mother, who has always supported him throughout his troubles, is rushing to him in Sherbrooke, and will remain with him until his case is concluded.

Vermont attorneys have been called together to map out their course of action in case Thaw is deported across the border line of that State. A conference between Attorney-General Brown and State Attorney Charles H. Powell of Essex County, following which Mr. Brown announced that he expected that Thaw would be returned through his State, furthers the belief that Thaw's lawyers have come to an agreement with at least one department of the government, to deport their client, and fight the battle on United States soil.

Mixup on Writ.

The misunderstanding which led to the rumor that friends of Thaw would attempt a rescue, and which for over an hour gave Jailer La Force a great deal of worry and confusion, has been explained satisfactorily. La Force himself said:

"Some one representing himself to be Judge Globensky called me on the telephone and said Thaw would not need to appear in court before Wednesday. I was not entirely settled as to the time because I thought he said something about today. As a matter of fact, I rather doubted that it was Judge Globensky. I was confused, particularly when I received another call. This time it was from a man who told me 'to get under cover because something is going to happen.'

Half an hour later the bailiff appeared and served the habeas corpus papers upon me, saying that I was to deliver Thaw immediately. Within half an hour I had been told to produce him Wednesday, today, and immediately.

"I found a crowd outside, and there were wild rumors that the prisoner was going to be taken away, but of course these were untrue, and I finally straightened matters out by consultation with the sheriff."

District Attorney Conger was keenly disappointed at the setback he has thus far received in his attempts to get Thaw.

"I do not know what we can do except to wait until Wednesday," he said. "From all information, it seems that his surrender to us is inevitable."

THAW'S ORIGINAL PLAN WAS TO HAVE MADE BOSTON IN FLIGHT

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 22.—That Boston was the objective point for Harry Thaw when he left Matteawan, and that he expected to find at least ten men who would help him to cover up his escape, was learned today.

The story is that after Thaw crossed the line into Connecticut, he was told that if he reached Boston he would be protected, but he was advised not to enter that city until he had communicated with some of the men whose names were written on a slip of paper he received from one of his companions.

Thaw motored to a point in western Massachusetts on Sunday, and his plan was to enter Boston on Monday. On Monday morning he went over the list of the names of ten Boston men on the memorandum and attempted to get each one on the telephone. They evidently did not expect to hear from Thaw and not one of the ten could be reached. Thaw did not care to go to Boston under the circumstances and started north.

Quebec was the destination he then had in mind, and he supposed the Maine Central train would connect with one for that city. He ascertained that it would not, so he left the train to drive across the country to reach the Grand Trunk line.

Law's Contradictions.

The Thaw case as it stands today is without parallel in Canada, or for that matter, in the United States. Hundreds of technical points, each seemingly a contradiction in law, have arisen, and must be fought out unless overridden by the courts.

The immigration law says that an insane person, or one who has been insane within five years, must be deported.

Thaw claims he is sane and has been sane; the New York State officials claim Thaw is insane.

The New York officials are preparing to issue papers asking for Thaw's return on a charge of conspiracy; an insane man cannot be guilty of conspiracy, according to Canadian law.

It is claimed that Thaw entered Canada by stealth; Thaw claims that he went across the border openly.

Roger Thompson is held for "assisting" an insane person across the border; he will claim that Thaw is sane.

The New York men demand Thaw's return across the New York border; Thaw claims that he must be sent back the way he entered.

The Minister of Justice demands that Thaw be turned over to the Immigration department; Sheriff Aylmer refuses to deliver Thaw, and will hold him for a court battle.

Incidentally it became known today that Thompson sent a long telegram to his wife at Hotchkiss Inn, Oxford county, New York, and signed it Daniel Bunny. Officials are today investigating this fact and expect to prove that Thompson is merely an alias. Canadian officials have spent the last two days in getting witnesses from the county roads along which Thaw rode into Canada, and a big array of legal talent and witnesses were on hand when the trial opened.

MYSTERY IN SUDDEN DISAPPEARANCE OF PRISONER'S SISTER

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 22.—The sudden and unexpected departure of Thaw's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, was believed to have something to do with a mission in Thaw's behalf. Another interpretation was that they had been advised to go in order not to appear implicated if Thaw escaped from jail.

Immediately after he had his breakfast, Thaw asked for the newspapers. After reading carefully the stories of progress of his case, he began writing telegrams and letters. He wrote a long letter to his mother, in which he said he hoped soon to meet her in Cresson, Pa. "My cleverness is not exhausted yet," he told her.

Crowd Pleases Prisoner.

Thaw also made many notes on his case and said he would have some important suggestions to make to his lawyers. His cell is littered with cast-off clothing, dishes of food and law books.

When the prisoner looked through the barred windows of his cell and saw a crowd of several hundred people in the streets about the jail, he showed his elation. The people of this part of Quebec are still making a gala occasion of Thaw's enforced stay here.

It is believed that by the time Judge Globensky gets ready to hear the habeas corpus arguments next Wednesday, the Thaw legal forces will have tried along several other lines to get Thaw's freedom. Just what action they will pursue appeared in doubt today. Thaw has engaged several new attorneys, and now has fourteen lawyers.

"Don't make them think that you are a monomaniac on hiring attorneys," counselled Dr. Evans.

Before leaving here, Mrs. Carnegie denied a report that a reconciliation between Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is likely.

"Harry is through with Evelyn for ever," declared Mrs. Carnegie. "They will not be reconciled and Evelyn will REPORT CHIEF OF THAW PLOTTERS HAS BOUGHT N. Y. SALOON

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—A report spread yesterday that Richard A. Butler, the man who is credited with having arranged Thaw's escape from Matteawan, had purchased a saloon a week ago. This is said to be located at the southeast corner of Thirty-fourth street and Eighth avenue. Yesterday a man who said he was Fred B. Kumpf, the proprietor of the saloon, denied with much indignation that the saloon had been sold. He said Butler occasionally visited the place, but that there had been no negotiations for a sale. In published stories of the alleged purchase it was said that $5,000 had been paid down on the purchase price, the remainder being held at mortgage.

"HARRY KNOWS NOTHING OF LOVE," DECLARES EVELYN

REPEATS STORY OF SACRIFICE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is breaking down under the fear that Harry K. Thaw may evade the law and succeed in reaching here. There were visible evidences of the strain under which she has been laboring since he escaped from Matteawan last Sunday, when an AMERICAN reporter saw her in the Hotel Brevoort.

Thaw's declaration from the jail in Sherbrooke that her return to the stage had prompted him to make his dash for liberty, and that he loved her more than anything else in life, were called to her attention.

"Good God," she exclaimed. "How can that man say he loves me when he would have let me starve in the streets!"

"Do you love him?" she was asked.

"Love him? I love him as much as he loves me," was her decisive reply. "He wanted to keep me down after I testified and sold my soul for him and I had done everything that a human being could do for a man and now he makes this maudlin statement about love.

Afraid of Her Life.

"I am more frightened of Harry now than ever before. I know that he will kill me the first opportunity he gets.

"This interview in which he persists that he still loves me was given out by him in a cunning effort to bring public opinion on his side. I don't know what I shall do. I shall never be free of this horrible nightmare again until he is safe in Matteawan. Even then I shall live in fear that he may escape again and that my life will be his insane goal.

"If Harry had had an opportunity I would have been killed long before this. I am surprised that Harry really hasn't found some way to put me out of this life long before.

"If he is freed from the asylum and does not get the opportunity to slay me he will make trouble for me just as long as I live.

He Is a Paranoiac.

"He is a paranoiac and he doesn't know what love is. He has never known the meaning of it as long as I have known him. As for taking care of me as any man who loved a woman would do, he and his mother threw me out after I had saved him from the electric chair.

"Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw entered into an agreement with me at the time of the trial to promise me with $12,000 a year on condition that I would consent to an annulment of our marriage. I did consent and the papers were drawn. Then his mother repudiated it. That was in June, 1912, and I have received no money from them since that time. Before that date I had received $70 a week and my rent. I had to dispose of pictures and scraps and save to live and I finally came to the conclusion that I had something within myself that I could prove I possessed the gift of making my own living, which is a gift after all.

"I thank God that I have that gift or his mother would be jeering at me in the gutter," and Mrs. Thaw broke into tears.

"He wants to spoil my life and my work," she continued turning to John Reilly, her counsel, who was in the room. "I told you that if I made a success he would want to injure me and here he has stated that my success was the thing that impelled him to break for his liberty. He wants to injure me and he will bend everything to that end.

"But there is worse coming if he retains his liberty. Things will begin to happen when he gets his drink. He is going to do something desperate I know just as surely as I could foresee the things I have referred to. Wait until he gets drink in him, it is too horrible to contemplate," and Mrs. Thaw again broke down and sobbed.

"Do you know that when I used to see him in the Tombs he used to be keen on Scotch whiskey? Let the Tombs officials deny it if they dare. I know it and they know it. Harry Thaw told me he could get all the rum he wanted there."

Child Thaw Repudiates

heroine of the murder trial and met there the young man, who always acted as host. They were seen together at the cafes and in the playhouses that border Broadway's muddy stream. The pair made no secret of their infatuation. Bohemia has no secrets. Its scenes become blunted. When the child was more than a year old the youth sold a story of its birth to the newspaper that first printed it. For this Evelyn Thaw never forgave him. They separated and a feud exists where love once was.

This is the Rialto story by guests and intimates, a story that may have penetrated the walls of Matteawan Hospital for the Insane. The tale of this romance preceding the retirement to Hamburg might have prompted a well ordered mind to denial of parenthood. Life's cross currents cause many an act that seems inexplicable.

The child remains then to all save the three most concerned an enigma.

If the story told by his mother and largely corroborated by circumstances is true, a golden future beckons him, for by law of human emotions and principles the urge of fatherhood will cause Harry Thaw sometime to acknowledge him. If he admits his fatherhood, the Thaw family will not long stand against recognition of it.

A Family Attitude.

The Thaw family has long ago learned the futility of standing against the inordinately developed will of its most tempestuous son. Outside prison walls and to a great extent within them he has had his way. This, assuming against the repeated decisions of the courts that Thaw is sane. In the character governed by a sane man the instinct to claim one's own is mighty. And his acknowledged child would be the heir of millions and will wield the power of millions.

If Thaw continues to repudiate the little one, certainly the family will have only the interest of repulsion in the child. Usurped by the son, Mrs. Thaw and her family would have, and show, nothing but hatred and contempt for the offspring of the woman whom they blame as Adam blamed Eve for all the woe that has overtaken them. Even though they believed the child half Thaw, they would resent him because he is half Nesbit.

Gabriel d'Annunzio wrote a novel around as unwelcome and unrecognized theme and named it "The Intruder." To the Thaws the wide-browed, dark-eyed boy with the strong will and ungovernable temper will always be "The Intruder."

But in this triangle there is another human point, the young man of Bohemia. In him, as the years sober him and and thought tempers his wild blood, the urge of fatherhood may be heard.

In Temper, Eyes and Face Evelyn's Child Resembles Thaw

"Russell Nesbit Thaw is a child of strongly marked personality. He is moody and addicted to rages. A man who had seen the little chap in one of his furies told me that to one who had seen Harry Thaw angry there could be no doubt of the paternity of the child after that tempest of temper.

"He lay on the bed where he was being held and kicked and glowered and would have cussed if he'd had a vocabulary," said the man, who is sure he has solved the riddle of the disputed infant.

"He has dark staring eyes, set far apart. Such eyes are Harry Thaw's most distinctive feature. Save for them he is a tall, loose-jointed, fleshy-featured man, with nothing especial to distinguish him even to eyes trained to see. The babe's face is a broad oval, as is Harry Thaw's. The two points of physical and one of psychological resemblance are strong."—Ada Patterson.

DELAY THOMPSON'S CASE FOR THE THAW INSANITY PROFS

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 22.—The Canadian government today showed its hand in the case of Harry K. Thaw.

F. Campbell, counsel for the Dominion government, secured a postponement for one week of the hearing of "Educated Roger Thompson," the New York city chauffeur, who is under arrest charged with aiding and abetting an undesirable alien to enter the country.

At the same time W. L. Shurtleff of counsel for Thaw returned from Ottawa after serving notice upon the Department of Immigration that it must show that Thaw is insane before he can be deported or extradited.

E. Blanke Robertson, assistant superintendent of the Department of Immigration, is here and has held several consultations with local physicians. It is reported that alienists will be brought from Ottawa and Montreal to examine Thaw for the government.

The indications now are that the government will immediately set about to prove Thaw insane. That would be acceptable to Thaw's counsel, as they have already taken steps to combat it under direction of Dr. Britton Evans, the famous New York alienist.

Louis St. Laurient of Quebec was added to the Thaw-Thompson legal army this afternoon. "We have a big fight on our hands, but we will win," said he.

The government has sent to New York for papers by which it is planned to show that Thaw is insane.

Thaw has issued an appeal to the public.

"Do not see me persecuted," he cried from his cell.

Six lawyers representing Thaw and Thompson were in court when Thompson's case was called by Judge Mulvena. They watch every move with cat-like caution.

In securing the postponement of the hearing Mr. Campbell said: "From the moment of this man's arrest we have been awaiting certain papers from New York. They are important. They bear on Thaw's mental condition and the government cannot go on without them."

After a long conference the lawyers reported an agreement and counsel for Thompson agreed not to combat the postponement.

BRYAN AWAITS BRITISH ACTION ON THAW WIRE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Secretary of State Bryan today awaits the action of British Ambassador Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice to his telegraphic message bringing the escape of Harry K. Thaw into Canada officially to the notice of the ambassador, who is passing the Summer at Dublin, N. H.

The Bryan telegram was sent in response to Acting Governor Glynn's appeal, preceding that of Sulzer, for assistance which the State Department is without authority to give to the extent of making a formal request for Thaw's return. The wired message read:

"We are informed that Harry K. Thaw, who lately escaped from an insane asylum in New York in which he was confined after acquitted of murder on the ground of insanity, is in custody in the province of Quebec with a view to his deportation under the Canadian immigration laws. The department, while not in a position to make a request in the matter, which in its present aspect is not within our extradition treaties, brings it to your notice with a view of such action as the Canadian authorities may find themselves justified in taking."

CHILD RESEMBLES THAW, SAYS ADA PATTERSON

By ADA PATTERSON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—A small, dark-eyed, wide-browed child of winsome manner and wilful character is the enigma in the long, changeful and continuously absorbing story of the Thaws.

The child is said to be on a transatlantic steamer, fleeing from the possible threatening presence of its reputed father. If this flight before the menace of a paternal visit has not yet begun, the three-year-old boy is still staying in a seaside village in England, guarded by a tender, intelligent and wary nurse. In either case it is the ghastliest game of hide and seek ever played by an infant, for whether the pursuit be real or fancied, there is no grimmer sight in a world of sharp contrasts than that of a child in fear of the murderous instinct of the man believed to be its father.

Russell Nesbit, for his mother threatens to drop the name of Thaw, is a child of strongly marked personality. He is far from the colorless, insipid, saccharine type the parents and Sunday school teachers praise as good. He is moody and addicted to rages. A man who had seen the little chap in one of his furies told me that to one who had seen Harry Thaw angry there could be no doubt of the paternity of the child after that tempest of temper.

He has dark staring eyes, set far apart. Such eyes are Harry Thaw's most distinctive feature. Save for them he is a tall, loose-jointed, fleshy-featured man, with nothing especial to distinguish him even to eyes trained to see. The babe's face is a broad oval, as is Harry Thaw's. The two points of physical and one of psychological resemblance are strong.

The possibility of parenthood in Harry Thaw's case cannot be denied. Some hand, whether made lax by Thaw cold or by heartstrings answering to a false sentimentality, made the life of the prisoner prison life in name only during two of his trials. Visitors came and went at will, and among these visitors was his wife.

There had been conjugal spats, but no open alienation before that time. Presumably they were still as congenially mated as seven-tenths of the married pairs we know. Within a year from this hot little restricted life of his Harry Thaw's wife went to Hamburg, in Germany, to lead as serene a life as possible, she said, before the birth of her babe—a state that all prospective mothers should enjoy. Within that year a son was born. Circumstantial evidence supports the theory that he was the son of Harry Thaw.

On the other hand, there is a story which has long re-echoed along the Rialto of an open romance with a youth who lives on the fringe of the theatrical world, which had been the mother's chosen element and to which she returned. The young man was of Bohemia. Persons who lived in that world dined and supped in the apartment of the

THAW LAVISH IN JAIL WITH AMERICAN DOLLARS

PRISONER A BONANZA TO CANADIAN TOWN

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 22.—If the legal hearings keep up to any length, Harry K. Thaw is a bonanza for this town.

The babies-in-arms know now that the name Thaw means money—big American dollars.

Thaw is paying lavishly for everything, and keeping up his youthful traits of bountiful tipping.

Messenger boys fight to see who shall deliver his messages. It didn't take the little fellows an hour to learn that every message taken to, or carried from, the tall American with the staring eyes, in the county jail, means a bigger tip than the local merchants ever pay. For that matter, the local people don't give tips to messenger boys.

But "an American," that's different.

Thaw hasn't forgotten how to wade through cash. He received a remittance of $1,000, but it was only twenty-four hours later when his brother-in-law, George Lauder Carnegie, was called on for more.

Thaw has spent over $100 for telegrams and telephone calls alone. He has been the most profitable individual patron of the local telegraph office and the telephone exchange that the town has known.

Credit is Good.

Over $20 has been spent for telegrams sent to him "collect."

More than $80 has gone for outward telegrams and for telephone calls.

One thing is noticeable—Thaw's credit was good for the whole town the minute people knew who he was. He had just twelve cents on him when searched at the jail by order of Governor La Force. He wanted clean linen and other articles.

The fat-seeing proprietor of the local department store was only too anxious and willing and glad to send anything to Mr. Harry K. Thaw of Matteawan, U. S. A., desired.

The jail guard who waits on Thaw will save enough to set up in business

Cigar Business Booming.

The cigar business here is booming. Thaw sent out for cigars the first day he was here. Then he sent out for a box. The cigars cost 15 cents apiece—by the box. A cigar that costs 10 cents straight is good enough to serve a big customer, according to Sherbrooke standard. When it comes to 15 cents straight, they stamp a man as independently rich and "owning his own home," as they say.

A man who buys smokers at 15 cents apiece, by the box, must have millions, in Sherbrooke eyes, and Thaw has used up three boxes already, and is well down in the fourth.

He is most liberal with them. Guards, reporters, anyone—every man with whom Thaw comes in contact, is asked to "have a cigar."

The man who is selling cigars to Thaw (via the guards) is thinking of renewing his stock.

Many of the cigar-getters are saving them for souvenirs of the man who put Sherbrooke on the international map.

One guard was offered a dollar for a cigar Thaw gave him. He refused.

The Fees.

There is all sorts of talk about the record fees that the Thaw attorneys are getting. But the retainers are conservatively estimated as follows:

F. J. McKenna, K. C.	$1,000
Charles D. White, K. C.	200
Fleix Bisson, former Crown Prosecutor	200
F. X. LaFlamme, of Montreal	200
W. L. Shurtleff, K. C.	50
H. F. Fraser, K. C.	50
Total	$1,700

Every struggling young attorney in the Dominion is saying to himself: "Only to have been on the job in Sherbrooke when Harry K. Thaw came to town."

"EVELYN CAN TAKE CARE OF SELF," SAYS CARNEGIE

Thaw's brother-in-law, George L. Carnegie, was asked:

"Should Thaw regain his liberty, is there any chance of a reconciliation with his wife?"

"No, I think not. While Thaw has the greatest sympathy for her and was considerably upset by the news that she had gone back to her old life on the stage, he realizes that for him all possibility of a reconciliation is past."

"Will he take care of her financially, or does he think the family should look out for her?"

"Oh, she is making good, you know, and is making plenty of money. She is able to take care of herself.

"Harry will take entire charge of his case himself. That shows how much confidence we have in his sanity and good sense."

ONLY ONE POINT PENDING SAYS JUDGE GLOBENSKY

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—"As the case now stands," said Judge Globensky, before whom the Thaw case is pending, "it has nothing to do with extradition or deportation proceedings. All that I have to decide is whether the warrant of commitment on which Harry Thaw is confined in jail, was legally issued or not.

"The writ of habeas corpus was issued Wednesday. It was to have been served on the jailer tustanter, in which case Thaw would have been produced in court before me yesterday and the merits of the case would have been argued. I would then have had to decide whether the writ should be maintained and Thaw set free or quashed and the prisoner returned to jail.

Writ Not Served.

"The writ, however, was not served on the jailer by the defence. When I left Sherbrooke I understood it would be served last night. I will sit in Sherbrooke again in the ordinary course of events on Wednesday next, and if the writ has been served by then Thaw will be brought before me and the case argued. Until next Wednesday, therefore, there will be no further action in the Thaw case as far as the habeas goes."

The Judge did not care to discuss the question of deportation or the probable action of the immigration authorities, stating that it did not come within his province. He thought that if the man was deported from Coaticook he would be sent to the State of Vermont, while if the proceedings were in Montreal he would be sent to the State of New York. This was merely an opinion which he had gathered casually, however, and he had not as yet looked deeply into its merits.

Only One Point Up Now.

In the matter of extradition Judge Globensky and his colleague, Judge Hutchinson, act as commissioners. No proceedings have as yet come before the courts in Sherbrooke in this connection, however, and the only point at present at issue is that brought up by the habeas corpus procedure.

"I want to make it clear," Justice Globensky said, "that I have not to decide whether the offence charged is extraditable or not, or give any ruling in regard to deportation or anything of that kind. All that I must decide is as to whether Thaw is at present confined in jail at Sherbrooke legally or not."

BURNS TRAILS NEW MEN 'HIGHER UP' IN THAW ESCAPE PLOT

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Burns detectives, armed with "John Doe" warrants, watched closely in the Tenderloin for the return of two of the three men accused of aiding the escape of Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan. They expect to make two or more arrests within twenty-four hours.

A positive clew has been obtained to those who engineered Thaw's escape. It was declared by an authority which cannot be disputed that only three of the five men who appeared in Beacon City prior to Thaw's escape are actually wanted as participants in the escape. It is believed the movement of this band was partly a "stall" to cover up the movements of men who arrived on the scene within a very few hours of the actual escape.

Today there was much activity among the Burns operatives, of whom fully a dozen were out in New York city alone. Three more were in the vicinity of Matteawan.

It was said the detectives had found a resident of Matteawan who had shown the conspirators over the roads toward the Connecticut line, pointing out to them the best roads to use.

JACK JOHNSON HOPES THAW WILL GET HIS LIBERTY

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Before leaving here today for London, where he is to appear in the Metropolitan Music Hall, Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, who is a fugitive from the United States, where he was convicted of white slavery, said he hoped Harry Thaw would get his liberty.

"I believe Thaw can escape in the same way I did," said Johnson. "I was a tourist in Canada; so I am told. But I have always thought Thaw was sane and I hope he gets his freedom. I would be one of the first persons to congratulate him if he gets away."

VARNEY AND HIS DISCOVERY TALK OF NEW ENGLAND

Supporters From All Sections Claim Remedy Var-ne-sis Most Remarkable Ever Given to Public

W. A. VARNEY

Men and women from all sections are daily adding their names to the long list of Var-ne-sis supporters, and every day is a busy day at the Hiker-Jaynes drug store, where he or his physician is meeting the public.

Letters from almost every State have been pouring in to W. A. Varney of Lynn, Mass., since the item appeared about his large collection of crutches and canes. This remarkable collection is due to the fact that he discovered a vegetable remedy some years ago which has been wonderfully successful in severe forms of stomach troubles and rheumatism. His success the past year has been phenomenal, and he is kept busy night and day to supply the demand of druggists everywhere.

Mrs. Silas Leach of 121 Marianna St., Lynn, Mass., says: "I am delighted to think that I am at last free from stomach trouble, after suffering for years. It is truly wonderful what Var-ne-sis has done for me."

J. E. Willet of 30 Fourth St., Lowell, Mass., suffered from rheumatism for years. Var-ne-sis removed every sign of the dread disease.

F. E. Davis of 22 Summit Ave., Haverhill, Mass., says: "I feel like a new man after taking this Var-ne-sis. I suffered from stomach trouble and rheumatism. If anyone wants to know what this medicine can do, just ask me."

Another remarkable case is that of Harry H. Chandler of Lynn, Mass. It is an odd-looking crutch that he made himself. For thirteen months he was unable to work, suffering so, as he said: "I felt like climbing into the cemetery or insane asylum." He was the most crippled man I had ever seen, and he told me he suffered from rheumatism and stomach trouble. Here's a crutch made on the battlefield by a veteran of the Civil War. Really, one can hardly believe the evidence before him.

"I read a great deal about this Var-ne-sis in the daily papers and considered it in the same class as all the quack medicines, paid little attention to it until friends persuaded me to try it. I suffered from eight-year muscular rheumatism so bad that at times I had to cry out with the pain. Sometimes I was so bent I kneeled my stomach on a chair. I had no appetite, and what food seemed to form a lump in my stomach, gas would form, and I was so nervous and tired all the time. I had little faith in any patent medicine, but decided to try Var-ne-sis. Well, I am glad I did, for in a short time I began to eat and sleep, and all my rheumatism left me and today I am a well man—thanks to Var-ne-sis. I tell you, if it cure me, but friends that I recommended it to had the same results."

THOMAS WILLIS,

64 Ocean Street, Providence, R. I.

Send for the Var-ne-sis booklet, which contains many more just such wonderful testimonials.

It was stated that W. A. Varney or the doctor would continue to meet the public every day at the Hiker-Jaynes drug store, corner Hanover and Washington Sts., to explain more about this remedy, Saturday until 10 p. m.

SAY NEW HAMPSHIRE LAWS LACK "INSANITY" CLAUSE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The statutes of New Hampshire and Vermont do not reveal authority for the extradition of Thaw from either of those States to New York on the ground that he is an escaped lunatic. The statutes covering extradition relate only to fugitives from justice from another State, who must be charged with a crime committed in that State.

It is held here that if the question were then brought up in the State where extradition was asked that Thaw, being insane, could not have committed a crime —that this question could not be adjudicated by the authorities of that State. The question would be for the New York authorities to decide after his extradition, it was said.

A decision of the United States Supreme Court in the matter of extradition between States holds that whether the charge brought is legal and "sufficiently laid in the indictment" is a judicial question to be decided by the courts of the State in which the crime was committed and not by the executive authority of the State upon which the demand is made.

Thaw once brought back in this manner, the question would then come up in the State of New York as to whether, being a lunatic under the laws of that State he could be tried on the charge of conspiracy. Whether he could be or not, he would be in the custody of the New York authorities and there would be nothing to prevent his reincarceration in Matteawan, it is said.

The sixty soldiers from the Seventh Company, Coast Artillery Corps of Biddeford, who went on the fire lines late yesterday, quit work just before dawn for a brief rest, then started in again as soon as their strength allowed.

The fire has burned over a total of 350 acres, with an estimated damage of $50,000.

Rev. G. A. Crawford Is Prison Chaplain

Selected by Warden Bridges as Stebbins' Successor.

Warden Bridges today appointed the Rev. George A. Crawford, of No. 136 Thorndike street, Brookline, acting Protestant chaplain of the Charlestown State prison. His salary is $2,000. Mr. Crawford is a retired chaplain of the United States navy. He succeeds the Rev. Herbert W. Stebbins of Winthrop, who resigned last week after a service of four years.

Warden Bridges said:

"I want a broad, liberal, humane man—a clergyman who is a good "mixer" and who can win the respect and confidence of all prisoners regardless of race or creed. I think Mr. Crawford fills that bill, for while I am warden of this prison I shall make no permanent appointment as chaplain until after an appointee has shown that he could make good in all requirements."

Believe Escaped Stowaway Is Lost

Abram Sabel, a Jewish stowaway on the British ship St. Patrick, escaped from the ship while the vessel was at anchor in President Reads last night, and it is feared that he has drifted out to sea. He took one of the ship's life buoys with him over the side. Captain May of the St. Patrick said today that Sabel had no knowledge of tides and doubted if he could swim. Sabel stowed away in the bunkers of the St. Patrick at Port Said when the vessel stopped to coal there on the way from Yokohama to Boston and was discovered when the ship put to sea. He was put to work in the galley and worked cheerfully until he learned that he would not be allowed to land in America, but would be deported when the ship sailed.

Largest Mackerel Catches in Years

Nineteen fishing vessels arrived at T Wharf today with one of the largest mackerel catches of recent years. In all there were 220,000 fresh and 52 barrels of salt mackerel brought in, running from three-quarters to one and one-half pounds in weight. Despite the large catch, the shippers of the fleet received good prices for their fish, ranging from 27 cents each for large ones to 5½ cents a pound for tinkers.

MRS. GERTRUDE HUNT EDMONDS of Quincy, whose elopement and marriage with Walter S. Edmonds of Brookline, became known today.

An elopement and marriage uniting a Quincy maid and a Brookline youth became known today when news came from Williamantic, Ct., of the wedding there of Gertrude C. Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Hunt of No. 191 East Squantum street in the Atlantic section of Quincy, and Walter S. Edmonds, son of Edwin Edmonds, contractor at No. 166 Melrose street, Brookline.

Miss Hunt is of age but Mr. Edmonds is only nineteen.

CASSIDY TELLS HOW N. H. LAWS ARE ENFORCED

Mr. Cassidy was greatly impressed with the work of the New Hampshire State Board of Health, demonstrated at the Rockingham Fair. He shows you more of the things it has accomplished and how superior it is in its work to the Massachusetts State Board of Health.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I want to call your attention to some of the prominent features of the laws of New Hampshire relating to the sale of food and medicines.

There is no better way to show you the inefficiency of the Massachusetts State Board of Health and how inferior and inactive it is compared to that of its sister State.

For instance. Ice cream of which I spoke yesterday must be 14 per cent. fat. Dealers are warned against the use of impure or inferior grades. Conditions of manufacture and sale must conform strictly to the requirements of the sanitary law.

This would be a knockout blow to some of the ice cream makers I have seen doing business under unsanitary conditions here due to the inactivity of the State Board of Health.

Take soft drinks. New Hampshire prohibits the use of saccharin instead of sugar, about which I have often told you. It also condemns soap bark, commonly known as "gum foam" or "foam."

It declares that when any substance which adulterates or makes inferior any soda water or soft drinks, such as added color and the like, A LABEL MUST BE AFFIXED TO THE BOTTLE SO THAT THE CONSUMER CAN READ WHAT HE IS DRINKING.

The Granite State law especially calls the attention of dealers to the label. Dr. Wiley is constantly laying stress on the importance of the label in his department of Good Housekeeping.

All labeling is for the benefit of the ultimate purchaser, argues New Hampshire. The law is the same for the dealer as for the jobber. If the jobber must label his package, as to what it contains, the retailer must label his in turn that the consumer may know what he is buying.

New Hampshire compels the retailer to do this. Here in Massachusetts the retailer can conceal this adulteration.

A word about malt extracts. New Hampshire says, "These differ in no very important essential from other malt liquors commonly consumed as beverages."

"Their medicinal virtues have been greatly exaggerated," says New Hampshire, "except in a very few instances, and are no greater than those of ordinary ale, beer or porter."

Lloyd Service to Boston Opens War

The passenger war between the Hamburg-American and the North German Lloyd steamship companies, which was expected to start early next year, has already disrupted the "ocean pool," according to Hamburg dispatches today. The announcement of the North German Lloyd line that regular freight and passenger service would be started between Boston and Bremen is considered a trespass on the Hamburg-American line's territory, it is said, so that they will retaliate by establishing, on September 16, a fortnightly steerage service between Hamburg and Baltimore. Heretofore the Baltimore service has been left to the North German Lloyd. The Hamburg-American Company hints at further war measures.

Wireless Hero Is Killed at His Key

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 22.—Another story of heroism was added to the annals of wireless telegraphy early today, when forty survivors of the wreck of the steamship State of California arrived here on the steamer Jefferson.

Donald C. Perkins, chief wireless operator on the State of California when the steamer struck an uncharted reef in Gambier Bay, Alaska, last Sunday morning, sat down at the key, but before he could send his first call for help a falling mast went through the wireless house and crushed him to death at his post.

Newton Celebrates "Playground Day"

"Playground Day" was observed in Newton today. Several thousand grown-ups watched 1,000 boys and girls perform on the Newton Centre playground. They were the children from the eight public playgrounds in the Newtons. The plan of an annual joint exhibition started last Summer.

In the afternoon two girls' baseball games played for the girls' championship of Newton. The Stearns playground girls who won the championship last year crossed bats with the Upper Falls girls' nine, and the winner played an exhibition game of three innings with the crack boy nine.

Old Santee Towed Here for Burning

The old navy frigate Santee, which was for a number of years a prison ship and receiving ship at Annapolis, Md., was towed in port today by the Baltimore tug John E. Chandler and delivered to a Boston junk dealer for breaking up. She was tied up to Storey & Wardwell's wharf in East Boston. After removing her fittings and whatever is of value in her she will be bonched and barned for the metal in her hull.

Cambridge War Hero Dead.

Charles J. Collins, eighty-six, a Civil War veteran, a survivor of the Cushing torpedo exploit and the oldest member of Post 80, G. A. R., of Cambridge, is dead at the home of his daughter in Scituate.

Wears Nose Ring to Prove Barbarism

Actress Startles Paris by Original Designs in Head Dress.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Polaire has startled Paris again. This time she has publicly declared that she is a barbarian and she intends to dress as such. At least, to the extent of wearing a nose ring and a peculiar headdress of her own designing which she affirms is altogether barbaric.

At one was leaving for Vienna last week to play a short engagement before starting for her American tour with Gertrude Hoffman and Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, her friends were shocked to find their pet decked out in a brilliant flowered orange and red bandana bound over her black hair curbon fashion, and a large gold ring fastened in her right nostril.

Chicago to Have Big Naval Wireless

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—One of the largest wireless stations in the world will be established at the United States Naval Training Station at Lake Bluff. Captain E. R. Clark, commandant, announced today that $100,000 will be expended in its construction.

Swedish Gunboat Is Sunk in Manoeuvres

MALMO, Sweden, Aug. 22.—While the manoeuvres of the Swedish fleet were in progress in the sound today an armed ship collided with and sank a gunboat.

POLAIRE, the actress, as she appears on Paris stage with nose ring.

Epidemic Spreading.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 22.—Three new cases of infantile paralysis are reported, making a total of fourteen. Five are on the East Side, which is thought to be a centre of infection.

MORE THAN 100 AMERICANS MURDERED IN MEXICO

LIST OF VICTIMS OF ATROCITIES BY REBELS AND BANDITS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The United States today served notice both on President Huerta and General Jesus Carranza that they will be held personally responsible for the safety of Shirley C. Hulz and W. B. Fuller and their families. Hulz is a son-in-law of Lieutenant-Governor Reynolds of Pennsylvania, and Fuller is associated with him in the construction of a large dam south of Chihuahua City.

The State Department has heard nothing from Hulz and Fuller for ten days and the latest news received was that they were in danger of their lives from the rebels. Couriers have been sent from Chihuahua City and Durango to where the Americans are located, and it is said that the department will receive definite news of their condition within a short time.

Washington Awaits Message.

Washington awaits the complete and definite statement of policy which President Wilson will give regarding Mexican affairs when he sends his special message to Congress next Monday. The President made no engagements for today and is spending all his time upon the preparation of this message, which will include the American proposals to Huerta by Envoy Lind and the reply of Huerta to them.

President Wilson does not propose to lay his hands entirely on the table in this message and will outline his future policy towards Mexico in only the most general terms. It is not likely that any event will intervene between today and Monday to cause a modification of the message, and in the meantime Envoy Lind has been instructed not to take any steps which will cause a change in the present status.

Secretary of State Bryan was called into conference by President Wilson early today in regard to the preparation of the message. Secretary Daniels also conferred with the President.

One hundred and twenty non-combatant American citizens slain by federals, rebels and bandits.

At least thirty-two other non-combatant American citizens shot or tortured.

At least thirty-two other innocent American girls and young wives, who believed themselves protected by the American flag, ill-treated, some of them before the eyes of their helpless fathers and husbands.

Millions of dollars in ransom exacted from American citizens, tortured or threatened with death.

Property valued at more than $150,000,000 owned by American citizens destroyed.

This, in part, is the terrible story of anarchy and murder in progress in Mexico. In no section of Mexico is the situation improved. It is steadily growing worse and after eighteen months of anarchy that has followed the overthrow of Porfirio Diaz.

Refuse List of Victims.

On July 24 Mrs. Paul Hudson, wife of the owner of the Mexican Herald, stated that when she left Mexico City the list of American dead for 1913, or die at the American embassy, numbered eighty-six. Since then many others have been murdered.

The list on file there now numbers 125.

The New York American yesterday requested the Department of State in this city and the American embassy in Mexico City for this list. It was refused.

The Wilson-Bryan policy of delay and non-interference in Mexico on the ground that all or nearly all outrages are due to recent acts of the Americans involved, does not find sympathy in any quarter here. In the belief of Senators and Representatives the situation has reached a crisis where something must be done. Men back from Mexico assert that the list at the embassy is only fragmentary. It tells only in small part the terrible story of murder, rapine and destruction enacted against Americans.

Garow, Boris, consulting engineer, killed when an attack was made on Nevra Buena Vista on February 21, 1913.

Woman Killed by Shell.

Holmes, Mrs. E. W., killed by a shell during the bombardment of Mexico City in February, this year.

Ward, Frank, shot in back by bandits in his home near Yago, Tepia Territory, April 9, 1913.

Howard John H. S., United States customs inspector, assassinated on Mexican soil, near Eagle Pass, Tex., February 10, 1913.

Unidentified prisoner, who was in deputy Howard's custody.

Soto, Bailo, merchant of Naco, Ariz., killed by stray bullet during conflict between federals and rebels on March 24, 1913.

Bushnell, L., mounted policeman, killed in Naco, Ariz., March 24, 1913, by a stray bullet fired by rebels.

Horace, Frank, killed by bandits in Coalcoman, State of Michoacan, in March, this year.

Russell, Herbert L., manager of American Vice-Consul McCaughan's ranch near the city of Durango, murdered by rebels, September 29, 1912. Consul Theodore C. Hamm cabled a report to the Department of State.

Williams, Robert, policeman, of Phoenix, Ariz., killed by Mexican bandits who crossed the line to attend a celebration of Mexican Independence Day in Phoenix on September 16, 1912.

Price, Scott, bystander, killed when bandits were firing on Williams.

Matheson, N., an aged and crippled Mormon, killed while fleeing from Colonia Morelos, Sonora, on September 16, 1912, when bandits were looting the town.

McKenzie, ——, an American resident, executed near Agua Prieta, in September, 1912, because the rebels suspected he had given information to federal troops.

Waite, W. H., manager of the Esmeralda plantation at Ochotal, Vera Cruz, killed in April, 1912, when he refused to pay money demanded by bandits. He was beheaded.

Fountain, Albert, captured by Orozco, the rebel leader, in April, 1912, and assassinated. Described to the Department of State by a United States Consul as a cold-blooded murder.

Harvey, J. D., American Mormon, killed at Colonia Diaz, May 3, 1912, by bandits.

Strauss, H. L., formerly a correspondent of the New York Herald, killed with thirty-four other non-combatants, when Zapatists held up a train, August 11, 1912, near Cuautla, Morelos.

Hertling, John, Douglas, Ariz., a German-American citizen, hanged near Nogales by rebels under Orozco in July, 1912.

Schubert, Guido, Douglas, Ariz., a friend of Hertling, hanged at the same time.

Stevens, Joshua, an American settler of Colonia, Pacheco, murdered by rebel soldiers while protecting his two daughters from assault. Press dispatches described his murder as the fifth in that American colony.

Kane, Thomas G., conductor on a Guanajuato railroad shot through head when bandits wrecked a train at Silao and killed many passengers on April 10, 1912.

Seffer, Peter Olsson, formerly a professor in the University of California, killed by rebels on April 20, 1911, together with three of his servants near Cuernavaca.

Camp, John, killed near the United States Immigration station in El Paso, Tex., May 9, 1911, when the rebels attacked Juarez.

Ferguson, R. H., of San Francisco, a member of Troop F, Third United States Cavalry, killed by bullet fired over the border.

Garcia, Antonio, killed in El Paso, May 9, 1911, by stray rebel bullet.

Two unidentified men, killed May 9, 1911, in El Paso, by stray bullets fired by federals and rebels.

Clarke, Dr. R. C., Taylorville, Ill., shot in Mexico City, May 27, 1911, by a partisan of General Diaz.

Lockhart, John R., Scott's City, Mo., mining engineer, killed by bandits in Durango, in November, 1911.

Meredith, R. N., Troy, O., struck by bullet in the Porter Hotel during the bombardment of Mexico City in February.

Griffith, Mrs. Percy, legs shot off during bombardment in Mexico City.

Thomas, A. H., murdered by bandits while protecting wife and seven children near Nogales, Sonora, March 10, 1912.

Huntington, Robert, railroad switchman, shot without cause near Agua Prieta, April 13, 1911.

Edwards, J. C., native of Virginia, shot to death while accidentally within rebel lines near Agua Prieta, April 13, 1911.

Crowe, Edward, killed by Mexicans shooting across United States border at Douglas, Ariz., April 13, 1911.

Anderson, Mrs., wounded, compelled to cook for Madero's soldiers at Casas Grandes, July 22, 1911, then shot to death. Her daughter ill treated.

the home of Frank Ward, an American, near Yago, in Tepic Territory, on or about April 9, and, after shooting Ward in the back and stringing an American neighbor named Marsh up by the neck and binding him hand and foot, four of these savages, in the presence of the dying Ward and the tortured Marsh, ill-treated Mrs. Ward. Then, from the roof of the looted home, an American flag was torn down, spit upon and trailed in the dust.

3—Through T. D. Edwards, American Consul in Juarez, the State Department was advised on July 22 of threats to kill all the Americans, including women and children, in the Madera settlement in retaliation for the death of two of the rebel leaders.

4—Mexican federals in the State of Durango, according to Associated Press advices on August 15, were shooting all prisoners taken, regardless of nationality.

O. V. Seifert, a mining man, was quoted as authority for this information.

5—From Tampico, Washington has received an official report that early this month Matthew Gourd, an American farmer, lashed to a tree, was compelled to witness the most dastardly outrages upon his two daughters, seventeen and thirty years of age, by bandits.

6—Since Francisco I. Madero, President of Mexico, was assassinated after he had been deposed from office through betrayal of his trusted aide, General Victoriano Huerta, now the provisional President, murder and pillage law have prevailed from the Rio Grande to Guatemala, and the Washington authorities, through the embassy in Mexico City and the consular officers in the several States, have been fully advised as to these outrages.

Shot by Stray Bullets.

7—United States citizens who were on this side of the border in Texas and Arizona have been shot down by stray bullets from the rifles of federal and rebel troops engaged in conflict on Mexican soil.

8—Statistics compiled from consular reports from Mexico show that the lives of 20,000 Americans are imperiled by the southern republic; that the $1,057,770,000 of American investments south of the Rio Grande have depreciated approximately 50 per cent, and that Americans and American corporations have suffered a property loss of $150,000,000.

As far back as April 21, Senator Mark Smith of Arizona presented a resolution in the United States Senate, calling upon President Wilson and Secretary Bryan for this information:

How many Americans have been killed in Mexico or wounded or driven from that country, what damages Americans have suffered, what claims have been presented and what action has been taken by this government toward enforcing them, what citizens have been held for ransom and what redress has been offered or demanded?

Senator Smith's resolution, like similar ones offered by Senator Poindexter of Washington and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, have been buried away in the pigeonholes of the desk of Senator Augustus O. Bacon of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

These three United States Senators have been held up to the American public as "Jingo statesmen."

The AMERICAN has repeatedly requested the state Department to make public the official advices received from Mexico. These requests have been ignored or denied.

Washington despatches of August 6 gave a detailed account of the report submitted to Secretary of State Bryan by M. A Leach of San Francisco, who was in Durango in June, when that city was sacked and burned and American citizens subjected to the most outrageous indignities. Representative Julius Kahn, of California, accompanied Mr Leach to the State Department.

PARTIAL LIST OF MURDERS AND OTHER OUTRAGES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Here is a partial list of the murders and other outrages compiled by the AMERICAN from censored press dispatches. The complete list cannot be given for the sole reason that it is withheld from the public by an order from the White House.

Wolf, U. G., mining engineer, murdered July 18, 1913, by outlaws in Northern Sonora.

Griffin, Benjamin, rancher, murdered July 8, 1913, near Chichiba by bandits.

INJURED LIST REVEALS CRUELTY TO AMERICANS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The greatest difficulty has been experienced in compiling a list of American women and girls who were ill-treated because of the unwillingness of relatives to even allow an official record to be made of the facts. The records in the American Embassy in Mexico City show that at least thirty American women were ill-used. A few of the isolated cases follow:

WARD, MRS. FRANK, ill-treated by four rebel soldiers near Yago, on April 9, while her husband, who was shot in the back, was dying.

GOURD, MISS, thirty, ill treated by bandits about August 1, after her father, Matthew Gourd, an American farmer residing near Tampico, had been lashed to a tree.

DETAILS REVEALED OF TORTURES BY BARBAROUS MEXICANS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Here are some specific instances which illumine the Mexican situation, details of which are in the hands of the officials of the Department of State, the accuracy of which have not been challenged:

1—During the twenty-four hours of officially sanctioned freedom accorded to the rebel troops by General Thomas Urbina after the capture of Durango, on June 18, hundreds of women and girls were outraged; Americans were ruthlessly shot down or thrown into prison; stores and homes were sacked and burned and anarchy reigned supreme. M. A. Leach of San Francisco, eyewitness to these outrages, journeyed to Washington and gave a complete, detailed and vivid account of the atrocities to Secretary of State Bryan.

2—Drunken bandits, posing as patriots of the rebel army, descended upon

GIRL'S OWN STORY OF BURGLARY

Chief Patrick Butler of the Weymouth police, in New York today, applied for extradition papers for Raymond Hutchinson, twenty-seven, believed to be one of a notorious gang of "chloroform burglars." Hutchinson's arrest was made after a remarkable story had been told by Miss Alice Brady, a seventeen-year-old housemaid, who confessed to assisting in robbing the home of her mistress, Mrs. Frances Tirrell, a wealthy South Weymouth widow.

For stealing $1,000 in diamonds, she says, she was paid but $20.

The young girl, who appears to have been infatuated with Hutchinson, declares he promised to wed her. She met him in a South End lodging house. He introduced her to his associates, and, she claims, also into the mysteries of picking locks, climbing porches and opening windows with a burglar's "jimmy."

Jewels Easy Loot.

The girl's alleged confession was:

"One day, three weeks ago, they asked me if I knew of any place in South Weymouth that would make an easy haul without much chance of getting caught, and I thought of Mrs. Tirrell's house with the jewels in plain sight in the little casket. I told them about this place and Hutchinson became interested immediately.

"That night he induced me to go to Weymouth with him and before we started he showed me a bottle marked 'chloroform,' and when I asked him what this was for, he said that he often had to use it in his business.

"When we left the train he made me hide my hat in the bushes so that if I was caught in the house it might be thought I was working there again.

"Hutchison then tried to pick the back door lock after forcing the screen, and when he couldn't he went to the front door which he managed to open, I think, with a jimmy.

Detectives Shadowed Girl.

"The next day he gave me $20, saying that the jewels were not much good, and that all he had been able to get for them was $40 and that he was splitting with me 50-50. Then a short time later I found detectives were hunting for me and I told him. He went to Philadelphia and I moved to several different houses and then to Revere, but the detectives followed me each time after spending a day or two hunting for me.

"Then, finally they found me and when I saw they knew so much I decided there was no use trying to bluff it out."

"Booze Auto" Driver Fined $100 in Maine

Upset Results in Capture of Much Sought Machine.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Aug. 22.—The "red booze auto" has been caught at last, but it took an upset to do it. Daniel Kaley of Portland was fined $100 and costs in Biddeford District Court today for illegal possession of liquor. He was driving the "red booze car" when it was overturned in cutting too short a corner in Kennebunk with York County deputies hot in pursuit in a second car.

Ever since the famous impeachments of sheriffs three months ago, the authorities have been bothered by whiskey being brought into the State from Portsmouth in a fast red auto.

RUTH HAMILTON DIES, RESULT OF LOVE SHOOTING

Ruth Hamilton died today in Yonkers, N. Y., two days after her sweetheart shot first her and then himself, because they could not marry.

She was seventeen, a Boston girl. The man, Charley Rich, was nineteen. They formed a suicide pact; agreed to choose death together rather than life separated. Then he shot her twice in the breast, and fired a bullet through his own heart.

She was seventeen, a Boston girl. The the girl has pleaded constantly since she was found and taken to St. John's Riverside Hospital, in Yonkers.

"Why didn't he shoot straighter? I wanted to die with him. I felt the bullets tear my breast, and thought I was dying.

"Then after a while I seemed to wake and saw Charley lying dead beside me. I dragged myself over to the road."

The shooting occurred Wednesday night. Rich and the girl had met at a tennis club in Yonkers and had played together during the last few months. Their families did not object when they became engaged, but did object to their marriage at this time.

Spoil Elopement Plan.

They planned an elopement, and the girl's chum betrayed them. After that the two decided to die.

Miss Hamilton was a Winchester High School girl. Her father, Roland Hamilton, was financial advertising manager of a Boston newspaper. He died fifteen years ago. A little over a year ago her mother, Mrs. Ellen J. Hamilton, moved to No. 1 Sunderland street, Roxbury.

Six months ago the girl went to live with her sister, Mrs. Henry C. Morand, in Nepperhan Heights, Yonkers. Mr. Morand is a broker.

Mrs. Morand did not object when the girl and Rich became good friends. But when they confessed the engagement and Mrs. Morand wrote to Mrs. Hamilton, the girl's mother was disturbed and at once wrote telling Ruth to come home to Roxbury.

This note brought the affair to a crisis, and the two young people planned to elope, choosing a night when Mr. and Mrs. Morand were to be away.

Kathleen Monahan, a chum of the girl, heard of the elopement plan, and wrote Mrs. Morand. Mrs. Morand did not go out that evening, and the girl was unable to slip away to meet Rich.

When the two left the house together, last Wednesday, they left this note:

Dear Harriet and Henry: Thank you for all the kindness you have both shown me and Charley. We are going to end it all. He cannot live and I want to be with him. Tell mother and my brother that you are not responsible for this. Love and kisses to all, especially to dear little Annette. You will find us not far from here.

Before the boy shot himself, he tucked a note in his coat. It read:

We thought it best to die together.—Ruth Hamilton, Charles Rich, Nepperhan Heights.

The girl was mortally wounded. The boy killed himself with a single shot. Miss Rena E. Oakley found Miss Hamilton and took her to the hospital.

The girl's mother, brother and sisters were at her bedside when she died. They came from Boston today.

HUNT EVIDENCE OF BRIBERY IN SULZER CASE

NEW YORK, Augt. 22.—The Assembly Judiciary Committee expected to have trouble today in running down a story that certain members of the lower Legislative House received money for voting to impeach Governor Sulzer.

The committee had subpenaed persons alleged to be responsible for the circulation of this story immediately after the impeachment, but they feared that the witnesses they desired might ignore the subpenas or refuse to testify, on the ground that the Legislature was not properly constituted and had no legal standing at present.

This is the point that Governor Sulzer wanted threshed out in the courts. The men under subpoena are Louis A. Sarecky, Sulzer's confidential clerk; Frederick L. Colwell, alleged agent for the impeached Governor in various Wall Street transactions; James C. Garrison, said to be one of Sulzer's press agents, and Lynn J. Arnold, publisher of an Albany newspaper and one of the Governor's advisers.

This is the second time the man has disappeared. On the previous occasion, while the police were looking for him, he reappeared and promised to wed next Sunday. Now he has gone again and Josephine is heartbroken.

Lose $10,000,000 by New Tariff Law

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—A report from the Secretary of the Treasury shows that the government would lose $10,000,000 if the goods now stored in bonded warehouses be taxed under the proposed duties of the Underwood bill instead of being taxed under the present tariff law. The Democrats are seriously considering adopting the suggestion of Senator Sutherland, that the Payne law rates be imposed upon all goods brought to this country and stored in bonded warehouses prior to the enactment of the impending law.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Chairman Edward E. McCall of the Public Service Commission today decided to accept the Tammany nomination for mayor. He has so notified Charles E. Murphy and other Tammany leaders.

MURRAY WINS STEP IN COAL INQUIRY FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Representative Murray won his first skirmish in the fight for an investigation of the Coal Trust, when the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce voted today to have the departments of Labor, Commerce, Interior and Interstate Commerce Commission furnish full information on the capitalization, ownership and control of the mines.

If the hearing Representative Murray feared his belief that the government departments now have in their possession quite information on the ownership and control of the mines and railroads run, when gathered together, will show interlocking directorates and other interesting facts proving a combination to fix the price of coal. Representative Gallagher desired to have the resolution referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission, but Murray in opposing this feared that what was desired was legislative relief and this could not be had by such reference. State Representative John P. Brannan of Cambridge spoke in favor of the adoption of the resolution. Chairman Adamson announced that the committee would secure detailed information and then act upon the resolution.

Murray is confident that when the facts are secured they will warrant the result in a complete investigation of the Coal Trust at the next regular session.

If some one were to put you on the inside of a perfectly legitimate scheme whereby one dollar could be made to double itself, you would not be long in grabbing it—would you? At least you would be willing to take a close-range look into the proposition. Now, we don't pretend to say that our Red Tag Sale will double the purchasing power of every dollar you spend here, but we do say that every two dollars you invest during this sale will bring you as much as three dollars ordinarily would—and in a great many instances a dollar can be made to do the duty of two, in a purchasing sense.

Our Plan Is This: Whatever we wish to clear out at once we put a Red Tag on. The original white price ticket remain on the article—the Red Tag shows the reduced price it is to be sold at. In this way you see the whole transaction—you see how deep the prices are cut—and figure out for yourself what you save.

Pickwick Ale on tap

"Cricket dinner — glorious party — capital songs — old port — claret — good — very good — wine m'am — wine."

Mr. Jingle undoubtedly had his faults—but no one can deny he was a good judge of the best in liquors.

If he could but have tasted the bitter hop flavor in Pickwick Ale, he would have been as warm in his praise for it.

Today it is Pickwick Ale that alone has that bitter hop flavor that made ales so popular in the days of the Pickwickian Club.

Ask for a glass the next time—and you will at once realize how delicious it is.

GARDNER ASKS RAILROAD FACTS FOR CAMPAIGN

Colonel Benton and Congressman Gardner, rivals for the G. O. P. nomination for Governor, are going to the outing of the Worcester County Republicans at Lake Shenange. Both will speak. Governor Foss was invited some time ago, but the invitation was withdrawn.

Before going to Worcester Congressman Gardner will speak at the Danvers Town Committee outing.

Congressman Gardner has solicited interviews with Howard Elliott, the new president of the New Haven, representing the newer element; Lucius Tuttle, the former president of the Boston & Maine, as representing another wing, and E. D. Codman, the former president of the Fitchburg road, as a third group. He plans to make a careful study of the Massachusetts railroad situation.

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh and Judge Thomas F. Riley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, disappointed 300 Bristol Democrats at their outing, near New Bedford, because of two blowouts and one puncture in the tires of his automobile on the way from Boston.

Edward P. Barry, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, opened his campaign, touring his home district, South Boston, and winding up with a rally in Newspaper Row. He criticised Richard H. Long of South Framingham, his opponent for the nomination, and Chairman Riley.

Although the clerks in the office of the Secretary of State were still engaged in completing the list of Progressive candidates for nominations for State offices, Secretary Donahue announced the time limit on withdrawals expires at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Chickens come home to roost.

Which bridges us naturally to the fact that some of the "Democrats" who voted in favor of the New Haven Trolley bill are beginning to regret it.

* * *

Take James H. Brennan of Charlestown. One of the youngest members of the Senate, he made a creditable record last year, but allowed himself to be led astray and voted for the trolley measure —though he did duck the vote on the veto.

* * *

And now it is freely whispered that Jimmy Green, former Representative, who is fighting Brennan in the primaries, will win.

* * *

All Gaul—according to Caesar—is divided into three parts. But all Democratic legislators are divided into two classes—Here are the classes:

1—Those with New Haven collars.

2—Those free from New Haven influence.

John A. Anderson of Dorchester, out for re-election to the House, has the legend, "No collar, no chain," on his political cards. Others are following his example.

* * *

Teresa Crowley, suffragist and lawyer, has applied at the Secretary of State's office for a complete list of all candidates for the Senate and House. She is preparing to lead a fight against candidates unfavorable to suffrage. The Suffragists are organizing the most extensive campaign they have yet attempted. They have two tests which a man must pass:

1—Did he vote for suffrage?

2—Did he vote for pure food?

* * *

Martin Lomasney, Czar of Ward 8—and incidentally of Wards 6 and 7—has a fight on his hands. He is bent on reelecting to the Senate Philip J. McGonagle, who succeeded the Czar's brother, Joseph Lomasney. But John H. Farley has entered the fight against McGonagle, and seeks both the Democratic and Republican nominations.

Ringside seats, $5 each. Let the fight proceed.

Representative Curley at Washington is using his utmost efforts to get that consumed collectorship of the Port of Boston disposed of before the election. John McDonald is the latest man to be "mentioned" for the post.

Judge Thomas P. Riley and Lieutenant-Governor Walsh spoke at the Democratic rally at Quincy Point, but Mr. Walsh did not commit himself on any issues, nor mention the name of Governor Foss.

* * *

Chairman Riley looked scared when he started to speak, till someone assured him "They're locked up." Last year Judge Riley frightened some ducks at the outing and they quacked at him all the time he was speaking.

* * *

Richard H. Long opened his campaign for Lieutenant Governor at the rally. He says he's all for President Wilson's nice new tariff.

* * *

"It will be the next Governor beyond a doubt."

It's as simple as that!

* * *

Governor Foss is still the despair of political forecasters. They have at last been convinced that he is not going to run on a party ticket.

But he has till October 6 to file his papers as an independent candidate!

The Governor has succeeded in forcing a real contest in the Republican primaries He is now determined to force each candidate to take a stand on the big issues of the day, especially railroad legislation.

* * *

If the four candidates shy at this issue —refuse to commit themselves, or evade and dodge their responsibility—Governor Foss may himself put an anti-monopoly platform before the voters.

More power to his elbow!

Englishman Took Goelet for Reporter

Thought Robert W. Wanted an Interview and Was Willing to Give It.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—An Englishman staying at the Ritz tells this on Robert W. Goelet, who has just sailed for France:

"The hotel clerk telephoned my room that a reporter wished to interview me. I came down in the lobby and found a well-groomed gentleman, stroking his mustache and apparently lost in thought. He seemed intellectual, and I thought he must be a member of your press. I asked what I could do for him. He said politely:

"I beg your pardon. I don't know—what can you do?"

"'Why, are not you a reporter?' I asked him."

"'Not that I know of,' he said."

"'I went to the desk and found that the man I mistook for a reporter because he looked intellectual was Mr. Robert W. Goelet.'"

Page Denies Slight Offered Consuelo

Says He Did Not Refuse Duchess Admittance to Reception.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Ambassador Page denies today the story to the effect that the Duchess of Marlborough, formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt, was refused admission to the American Ambassador's Fourth of July reception. The tale was that she was incensed and later wrote Page a scathing letter.

He says the story is silly, adding: "I never received any letter from the Duchess."

What Telephone Operator Has Been Longest at Work?

Is It Elizabeth Wentworth?

Miss Elizabeth Wentworth.

Miss Elizabeth Wentworth of Roslindale is another "hello girl" claiming the $25 offered by the AMERICAN to the telephone operator who has seen the longest continuous service. She claims thirty years with a perfect record.

This novel "hello girl" competition follows the AMERICAN'S award of $25 to "Cy" Adams of Newburyport as the street car conductor who was longest in continuous service. This week is devoted to the telephone girls.

Miss Wentworth went to work July 29, 1883, with the Telephone Dispatch Company, which soon changed its name to the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, with offices at No. 50 Pearl street. In 1895 she was transferred to the pay station department and worked at the Hotel Brunswick, Hotel Thorndike and at the Crawford House, where she is employed at present. FIND LIVING COST BURDEN TO TEACHERS

The fact the cost of living has risen from 40 to 50 per cent. since 1897 should not be left out of a consideration of teachers salaries, according to the report of a special committee's country-wide investigation, just published by the National Educational Association. The $600 teacher of 1897, it is shown, draws $684 now, but that sum is only equal in purchasing power to $466.22 in 1897. The salary increase of 14 per cent. therefore leaves her worse off instead of better.

The budget of a kindergarten teacher thirty-four years of age with fourteen years' experience who is keeping house for herself alone, is given. Her salary is $735, to which she adds by Summer school work. She spent $820.62, as follows:

Rent	$131.25
Laundry and housework	76.42
Fuel and gas	42.90
Food	305.00
Clothing	213.14
Doctor	10.15
Car fare	19.52
Schooling	20.50
Club and entertainment	19.05
Literature	22.75
Fees, sundries	84.27
Total	$839.62

A woman grade teacher of thirty-four, who provides four-fifths of the living expenses of her mother, spends out of a salary of $920, the following:

Food and shelter for two	$555.00
Clothing	80.00
Insurance	87.00
Pension fund	20.00
Car fare	28.00
Church and charity	20.00
Doctor and medicine	15.00
Amusements	10.00
Ten days' summer trip	90.00
Miscellaneous	45.00
Total	$830.00

That teachers themselves are largely to blame for their poor pay because of "jealousy, competition, undermining, envy and trickery at times resorted to," is one of the observations in the report.

John Lahirt, who was driving the carriage, was thrown out, receding a broken leg. He has entered suit for $7,000. Lahart's horse ran away, jumped a fence and tipped over a baby carriage containing four-year-old Ruth Nelson. The child's shoulder was broken.

CITE WOMAN IN DIGGS CASE BRIBE CHARGE

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 22.—Pending the calling of the trial of F. Drew Caminetti on white slave charges next Tuesday, investigation is being made today of the charge of the Diggs juror, William Bliss, that Mrs. Charles D. Lane, a personal friend of Mrs. Anthony Caminetti, tried to bribe him. She has been cited to appear before Judge Van Fleet next Tuesday.

The writ was forwarded to San Diego to be served on the woman by the Federal authorities there.

At the United States District Attorney's office Bliss answered many questions and made an affidavit embodying the facts of his being approached. Special Government prosecutors announced that Mrs. Lane, whose address had been No. 122 West Clay street, according to Bliss, had left the city immediately after the incident and was in San Diego.

Mrs. Lane is said to be the widow of a mining millionaire, who contributed $500,000 to a State fund to boost William J. Bryan's first campaign for President.

Bliss said Mrs. Lane had telephoned him and then had called at his office. First she asked him how he stood with the papers, Bliss said. When he replied that he was "all right," she said, according to Bliss, "I understand that you are a juror in the Diggs case."

This was followed by the remark, Bliss said, "Mrs. Caminetti is staying with me, you know."

Then Mrs. Lane said, according to Bliss, she wanted to buy a mine and understood that he had one to sell. At that Bliss says he told the woman that he could not talk to her further, and the meeting ended.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 22.—Hugh Bedient, who has done splendid work in the box for the Red Sox during this trip, will be relied on to take the second game from the Naps today. Fred Blanding or Cullop will do the pitching for Cleveland.

The Red Sox insist that the Naps put them out of the first division but by winning eight successive games from them, and they intend to clean up on Birmy's boys in the entire series here and thereby put them out of the pennant fight.

You've got to hand it to Umpire Silk O'Loughlin for new things in baseball. He was the originator of a decided innovation here Thursday, one that will keep the "fans" talking for some time to come, especially if the game which the Red Sox are credited with winning from the Naps loses the pennant for Joe Birmingham's boys.

The Naps came to bat in the eighth inning with the score of 4 to 2 against them. The odds were all in favor of the Red Sox winning, but O'Loughlin did not give the Naps a show for their white alley, so to speak. Jackson and Lajoie were on second and first respectively by grace of singles. Two were out when Turner came to bat and, with two strikes and one ball on the batter, O'Loughlin called time on account of rain, well realizing that by calling time there was little chance for play to be resumed. When he did call time it was not raining any harder than it had been for an entire inning previously, but that made no difference to Silk.

Pilgrims Purchase Rochester Players

It was learned today through New York sources that the Boston Pilgrims have purchased outright the release of Pitcher Jack Quinn and First Baseman Schmidt from the Rochester team of the International League. The story could not be confirmed in Boston today, as Manager George Stallings of the Pilgrims is at Buffalo.

It is not known as yet whether these players will report immediately or at the end of the season. Quinn has been in the majors before and many predict that the next time up with the big leagues will see him stick. Schmidt is a young star in the game, but has played a wonderful game this season and his work has attracted the attention of many of the big league teams.

Sandpipers Take Westchester Cup

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—The Westchester polo cup was won by the Sandpipers when they defeated the Philadelphia Country Club at polo by a score of 9 to 8. With the score tied and but eighteen seconds to play, Rene Lamontagne clinched the game for the Sandpipers by making another goal. At half time the Philadelphia team had a good lead, but this was overcome during the latter part of the game by the aggressive playing of the Sandpipers.

YALE FOOTBALL MEN TO BEGIN PRACTICE SOON

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 22.—Following out a different rule than former years, candidates for the Yale football team this season will report for preliminary work earlier than usual. This was made known in a letter to the candidates from Captain Henry Ketcham, who is summering in the outskirts of Quebec, Can.

Captain Ketcham has requested about twenty players to meet him and Head Coach Howard Jones at Biscoonset, on the island of Nantucket, Mass., where they will be the guests of H. S. Fair, a Yale graduate, on his estate till they return to New Haven on September 11 for the general preliminary practice preceding the playing season.

The Nantucket work is designed merely for the heavy linemen and will not include much technical football. It will be largely conditioning in its nature, but may include some rudimentary gridironing.

At the same time, ten of the backfield will be in Newport under the direction of Billy Bull, creator of most of Yale's drop and place kicking stars. The full squad will be called together for their first drill, September 1.

Jeanette to See Langford Battle

Many of the prominent heavyweights in the East will be at the ringside at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night to get a line on the work of Sam Langford and "Porky" Flynn in their twelve-round bout. The directors of the club have heard from New York that Joe Jeanette and his manager will be in town to explain to his friends the reason for Langford side-stepping a chance with him in New York. Word was also received from Gloucester that Sandy Ferguson, who has been in retirement there for some time, is coming up to challenge the winner.

Ferguson always thought he could beat Langford, and gave him a hard battle every time they mixed it, but at the present time it is doubtful if Sandy could mix things with Sam. He has been out of the game too long.

The preliminary men are all in good condition. Andy Cortes and "Young" Jasper should make things hum, in their eight-round match. So will Joe Chick of Fall River and Jimmy Krause of Philadelphia, while the championship of Canbridge and the West End will be at stake when Joe Quinn and Ted Murphy meet.

Ten Eyck Accepts Riley's Challenge

The men are to row not later than September 9, for a purse of $500. Mr. Riley is sixty-five years old, and Mr. Ten Eyck is sixty-three. The race will be rowed on Saratoga Lake.

NORWICH, Ct., Aug. 22.—Edward Clark of Springfield, Mass., holder of the Van Winkle medal in the first division, strengthened the probability of retaining the trophy by defeating Challenger C. C. Cox of Malden two games in the National roque tournament in progress here. The score now stands: Clark 3, Cox 1.

TYLER WILL TRY TO STOP CARDS TODAY

Today the Pilgrims and Cardinals engage in the second contest of the present series, which will probably be a battle of southpaws, Tyler against Dosk. If both these chaps run true to form the game should be somewhat of an improvement on that of yesterday, which most of the time resembled a farce comedy. The Pilgrims are still under the guidance of Sweeney, as Stallings is in Buffalo, where his wife is seriously ill, though on the road to recovery. In both his recent essays as a manager, Bill has showed an inclination to allow a shaky pitcher to stay too long in the box. Dickson Wednesday and Hess yesterday might well have been sent to the showers long before they were. However, luck smiled yesterday and in victory faults are easily forgotten.

Zinn Made Splendid Showing on Debut.

Young Mr. Zinn was the bright particular star of the Pilgrim win over the Cardinals yesterday. This chap, it is said, "strafed" up in Rochester, because he had the idea that he could not be in the big league. If his playing yesterday is any criterion, he didn't overestimate himself in the least. His first appearance at bat resulted in a solid single, which nearly took the legs off Mowrey. His next attempt was a fan, but on the third trial, with a man on, he knocked Grimer out of the box with a solid triple that caromed off the far centrefield fence. His next effort was hit hard enough, but went directly at O'Leary, and was scored an error. Reaching first three times out of four is not bad for a beginner.

Stands Up Just Like Joe Jackson.

His fielding was just as good as his hitting. He had six put-outs and one assist. Two of his chances were on solid line drives which he had to go some galloping to reach, while he took all of his in a very graceful and efficient fashion. The assist was a peg to Mamaville to try to nip a runner at the plate, but was rendered fruitless, as Hariden let the ball fall out of his hands when the runner banged into him. The new outfielder stands at the plate in very free and easy style, for all the world like Joe Jackson, the Nap slugger. He has none of the peculiar crouch position that mushroom hitters like McDonald and the late lamented Steve Yerkes used to affect. All in all, he gave the best exhibition any Pilgrim outfielder has for quite some time.

They Can't Stop Hub from Hitting.

Old Hub Perdue fattened up that accidental batting average of his in typical style. His one turn at the plate rolled round in the lurid ninth, when Zinn and Whaling had reached first by virtue of errors. The peerless swatter was expected to sacrifice. The way he fondled his club announced the fact even to the conductors on the cars on Columbus avenue. Consequently, when the ball was pitched, Koney, Harmon et al made a wild rush to the plate. Hub pushed out the bat, the ball popped up, dropped over the heads of the advancing enemy, and mulled safely between the pitcher's box and first, far from any of St. Louis fielder. As Hub thundered across first, wild cheers brought a smile denoting work well done to his florid face. That average now has five hits as one of its parts.

M'LOUGHLIN WINNER OVER W. J. GLOTHIER

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—As the large crowd turned out today to witness the tennis matches at the Casino today but four matches were on the card, but they were productive of some great tennis.

Maurice E. McLoughlin came through again today in the feature match, defeating William J. Clothier in two straight sets, 6—3, 7—5, 6—4. It was a great fight against the steady game put up by the Californian, proved to be fast and accurate in his play. The summaries:

N. W. Niles defeated H. Breadth, 6—0, 6—7, 6—2.

R. N. Williams defeated C. P. Law, 6—4, 8—6, 6—1.

J. R. Sheahan defeated E. H. Whitney, 6—4, 6—0, 6—1.

M. E. McLoughlin defeated W. J. Clothier, 6—3, 7—5, 6—4.

Lockwood and Brown Win Belmont Match

In the first match of the second round of the State foursome now in progress at the Belmont Country Club, the Belmont team, Arthur G. Lockwood and R. W. Brown defeated the Oakley pair, C. A. Harwood and N. W. Iseon, 5 up and 4 to play in a very one sided match.

After the first hole had been halved, the winners opened up and had 4 up at the turn. By taking the 11th, 12th and 13th holes they increased this to 5 up and 4 to play. A half in the 14th hole also ended the match.

The cards:

Lockwood and Brown	4	4	5	5	4	3	4	6	5	41
Out	5	5	5	5
Dean and Harwood	5	4	4	7	5	5	4	4	5	41
Out	4	5	4	7	5	5	4	4	5	41
In	5	4	5	6	6	5

All the other matches in the second round were started, but Drew Ware was playing nip and tuck with Wellington Long 1 up at the turn. This advantage was lost at the 10th hole, but immediately won back on the 11th.

INCOMPETENT OFFICIALS HURT AMATEUR BOXING

By JACK CONWAY.

NEW ENGLAND amateur boxers will refuse to perform again in a few more weeks. Several clubs are now planning to promote shows for the "sake of pure glove work here."

Few good boxers have developed in the amateur ranks during the past few years. Some of the best have done so, as amateurs that have met in the ring for the title, but quit for the lure of the cash which they got for the use of their gloves elsewhere.

One of the chief reasons why more star amateur boxers do not developed is because the almighty purse do not receive much encouragement from the A. A. U. Many of the officials at many of the amateur shows treat the boys like a bunch of them lads sixteen and seventeen years old as though they were not men themselves. His supervision may seem rather strong, but it is a cold fact and cannot be denied.

Some of the amateur referees and [illegible] throughout the ring as though they had been appointed over a superior power and were out to make a mistake. They [illegible] to task for actions that are not legal under the amateur rules, and often disqualify boxers because they dared to fight for their rights.

There are of course many bright cases of affairs at amateur shows. [illegible] Brossil of Cambridge is a credit to the sport but there are [illegible] poor referees to every good one.

SPORT IS MONEY MAKER.

THE A. A. U. and [illegible] down on [illegible] rated with [illegible] thousands of dollars each year [illegible] of amateur boxing tournaments. We do not know, nor care what they do with this money, but we do know that but a very small percentage of it goes toward boosting amateur boxing.

The winning boxers [illegible] the different classes usually receive a gold medal or watch while [illegible] in the final bouts [illegible] what they or the [illegible] and medals are [illegible] in some cases [illegible] though in the [illegible] up to tournaments fairly good [illegible] are awarded.

It would not [illegible] idea if the A. A. U. should [illegible] quarters where amateur boxers could train. They could do this [illegible] be using a small part of [illegible] they get paid for it keep [illegible] future bouts. The GREATEST STORY of its Kind Since JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Work two hundred miles out under the ocean, three thousand men at work pushing a great tunnel that under the Atlantic, the most gigantic engineering feat ever conceived by the mind of man. Rives, the chief engineer of the new work, has just arrived in the nick of time after a trip from shore in a tunnel train running over a hundred miles an hour. Suddenly there is an explosion and men and machinery are swept backward by a tremendous blast. Then there is a scene of horror. Rives and a few survivors stumble on foot and from the lower, all other workers have met death in the wave of cold lights at mean station No. 4.

A train is standing there, but just as the leaders of the survivors reach it the wires of the rear car, the train which will prove the rescue, have been cut, and cursing and ruining in the dark.

The story then goes back to the beginning of the great project. A number of financiers are forced out of control of the affairs by Hotel Anahuac and together by the sum of $2,000,000 for their interest. Among those thus bought out are Rives, Director A. L. Allan, Jacques Bergerac and Allan. My uncle, a wealthy Englishman, is also a director.

The tunnel work is half on the Jersey coast, and it work is passed at top speed. Twenty thousand men, with great dredgers push down to the bowels of the earth. Simultaneously are being carried in Bergerac's hotel in Paris and on a great plan beyond London. Allan is the most unhappy man in the world. He has never met Rives, but his daughter Genevieve and his wife tells Rives how deeply she is hurt. Mrs. Allan and Rives find their love can another, and Genevieve, who blames herself, but she knows it could not be helped.

When the news of the disaster in the tunnel reaches the surface, the workers go crazy. Harriman, Rives' chief of staff, is mobbed and flees for his life. He takes in his auto and tells Mrs. Allan. Not supposing the mob is anywhere near the house, he goes out on the street. Allan returns to Tunnel City to find his wife and child and Rives his best friend, shut up in the tunnel and probably dead also.

He calls a conference of his engineering staff and scores Harriman for cowardice.

"Your authority here is done," said Allan. "You can never command the respect of these people again"

Now Go on with the Story

(From the French of Bernard Kerma by German Book and Newspaper Syndicate. Copyrighted, 1913, by International News Service.)

ALLAN Harriman opened his lips but no one did not speak. He knew that he had not run because he was afraid, but what was the use? Excuse couldn't help.

"On the whole," Allan was saying, in the same brutally calm tone, "Baermann, so far as I can see, is more useful dead than you are alive. Your authority here is done. You can never command the respect of these people again."

The older man rose unsteadily to his feet and his muscles suddenly set. He took a half step forward and one of the younger men rose and laid his hand on his arm. The others still kept their eyes on the floor. Allan never took his gaze off Beaumont's face, and the cold, contemptuous expression never changed. Harriman's figure suddenly relaxed and he swayed slightly.

"You mean——" he began in a voice that was barely audible, though the stillness of the room was on the room.

"I mean," said Allan, "that you are excused from duty. I'll see you again in a day or two. Good-night, Harriman."

Without a word Harriman turned and reeled out of the door. He was barely gone before Allan turned to two of the young engineers who had left their posts and come in with the men when the panic spread through the workings.

"You can go—you two," he said. "And college can give five hundred engineers in a year, but it takes men to drive a tunnel under the ocean. You two had better stick to plain engineering hereafter."

HIS SPEECH

There was a little silence after that. Allan sat staring at the floor. Finally he threw back his head. The dead, lifeless look was gone from his eyes and the bitterness from his voice. In a low voice he talked for ten minutes to these men who had done their best, and when he had finished any one of them would have died for him.

"It's the first nasty smash we've had," he said in conclusion, "but it won't be the last. I thought I had picked my men well, and making only three mistakes in a body ride size isn't so bad. I know the men are the best in the world, and it's only the best that can handle this work. Now, if any of you have any complaint against the general management, if you think you're not treated right, financially or otherwise, let me hear it now and I will guarantee that no man leaves this room dissatisfied. Every man who works for this tunnel has got to face death or anything else that comes along. I can't help that—it's the nature of the work. But there ought to be honor enough to go around, and I know there's money enough. Nobody anything to say? Then, as an evidence of good faith, I'll order 10 per cent. increase on the executive payroll and—I'll ask you to shake hands and we'll start in again. Saunders, you will take Harriman's job. Lefevre, you move up to Saunders' place—and it'll keep you moving to make us forget that Saunders isn't there. Now, I'm off."

"Shall I go with you, Mac, as the new chief of staff?"

"No, you stay here and take command. Lefevre, you come along."

"Where?"——began Saunders and stopped.

Mac looked at him a moment.

"Into the tunnel. Come along, Lefevre."

Twenty minutes later a train that Allan had ordered assembled before the went into the conference was flying down the grade to the entrance of the tubes. It was made of only two coaches and a locomotive. In the coaches were a few picked engineers, and all the doctors that had been gathered that day that could be spared from the hospital with numerous bags and boxes of "first aid" supplies. Allan stood at the controller, driving the engine, and Lefevre stood beside him. The dispatchers assured him that track No. 2 was clear for a hundred and fifty miles, and would hold Robinson's train at that point for him, as they could guarantee only the one track—No. 3—from that point on.

To make doubly sure he had talked to Robinson on the telephone before mounting the cab, and had also asked for word of Rives. There was none; but he chose to take one slender hope—an air pump was working farther down. He threw on the full current, and the great engine leaped ahead almost into the glare of its own searchlight, quivering and swaying, while a heavy monorail beneath loomed and purred under the heavy whirring wheels. Minute after minute they hurtled through the interminable tube, broken only by a flashing glimpse of a red danger key in the portals going, and then the long, shining perspective and deep, steady hum once more. Allan never spoke of turned his head. He stood like a statue, with one hand on the controller, but neither hand moved.

THE RIDE OVER.

At last the brake signal for the 150th mile station flashed out send of them. Fevre glanced inquiringly at him and then the right hand moved slightly. The power was reduced. The brakes began to squeak at intervals. The mad ride was over.

Lefevre glanced at his watch. An exclamation broke from his lips and he looked quickly at the little clock above the air gauge. Then without a word he held up his watch before Allan's eyes. The latter nodded grimly and brought the train shrieking in the grip of the brake in the station.

They had covered the one hundred and fifty miles in sixty-one minutes!

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

"I WANT you to tell me what to do with certain articles," she explained. "Everything is just as you left it," she said, "I would not have anything touched."

"You are very good," replied Genevieve, coldly, "but you must excuse me from going into such matters tonight."

But"——began the mother.

"I am too tired and I don't feel like it. Some other day, when I have not just come from a long railway journey."

The result of all this was that she asked her husband the first thing in the morning if their own house could not be got ready for them that day, and upon his deciding that it could at least be made habitable, she announced it as her intention to remove immediately. And she did so, carrying out her determination not ungraciously but firmly, accepting inconveniences and parrying objections, till Dr. Cameron felt very much flattered at her evident preference for his side and undried society. And so it was that Genevieve Cameron the wife cut the strings which bound her to Genevieve Grotevers the girl.

It was the second morning of their new life in their new home that Dr. Cameron surprised his wife searching the columns of the morning paper with great eagerness. Her face wore an anxious look, and her hands trembled nervously.

"What is it?" he asked. "You seem to be looking for something especial, Genevieve?"

She at once dropped the paper.

"Oh, no," was her nonchalant reply, "I was only wishing away a spare moment or so. Is it time for you to go out?"

It was, but he lingered a moment.

"I wish I understood you," said he.

"I understand me?"

"There are moments when you seem miles away from me."

"Oh, no! Oh, no!"

"Not this moment," he whispered, for she had thrown her arms about his neck and hidden her face on his breast.

"At no moment," she replied. "You are too strong a man to cherish fancies."

He thought so, too, and laughed; he was so free-hly alive to love that it made him hyper-sensitive.

"You would make any man think black is white," he cried.

"I am afraid I should have difficulty in persuading even this man that white is black," she laughed, touching her hair with her jeweled finger.

"I don't know," he murmured, "you have not tried." And so their parting was pleasant.

Next morning she was first at the paper again, and this time she explained herself.

"I do not see any notice of Dr. Molesworth's arrest. Should it not be in the papers?"

"Certainly, and I have been wondering about it myself. They can give me no news of him at the hospital, and the case he spoke of has become mine, but there is no trace whatever of his being in custody or even under the surveillance of the police. I think I will hunt him up at his home."

MOLESWORTH AGAIN

"It would be kind of you," quoth Genevieve.

And thus it was that Dr. Cameron rang Mrs. Olney's bell one morning, and, being ushered in, asked for Dr. Molesworth. He was told he was not well, but saw a few patients, and perhaps would see him; whereupon Dr. Cameron sent in his name and waited with considerable curiosity for the response.

It came speedily, and was to the effect that the doctor would be pleased if he would step to his office. Dr. Cameron at once complied, and upon entering that bare and unattractive spot saw first the figure of his colleague stretched upon a long bat-cloth sofa, and next that of a small and insignificant man, who, with his face bent over a cheap novel, which he held in his hand, seemed to take up a certain amount of space rather than add his personality to the scene.

"I am glad," began Dr. Molesworth, springing to his feet as the door closed and he served, "for an opportunity——ask you how our patient is getting on."

Well," returned the other, "considering that the nurse snakes her head over every drop of medicine she gives her." You will have the nurse removed, the case is not a fit——for any such nonsense as that."

Dr. Cameron nodded and looked curiously at his companion

"You are ill, then, sir."

A little shade darkened the corners of the other's lips for a moment

"I have a nurse, you s——"

Dr. Cameron cast a glance at the silent figure of the man in the corner.

"I understand," his intelligent look seemed to say. Then, with quiet solicitude: "And how soon do you think you will be well?"

Dr. Molesworth shook his head. "As I have not yet made a satisfactory diagnosis of my case, I will not venture to prophesy."

"Do you want a prescription?"

"No——"

"Do you want anything?"

"Not from you."

Dr. Cameron smiled. Dr. Cameron looked at the speaker with renewed interest.

"I was uneasy about you," was his curious remark; "so was my wife. I am glad to find you comparatively comfortable."

"Mrs. Cameron is very good." Dr. Molesworth's bow was pro said, his tone very serious.

Dr. Cameron moved towards the door. "I judge," exclaimed the other with an appeal of much respect, "that the events I was brought me such misfortune be sent you the happiness of your life?"

The light in his visitor's eye was unmistakable.

"You have said it," he assented.

Dr. Molesworth's lips parted in a smile that touched the other strangely.

"I congratulate you," said he, and softly closed the door between them.

Trivialities

DR. CAMERON met his wife at a restaurant that afternoon and they went home together. He had told her of his interview with Molesworth and she had uttered a polite word or two of thanks, but her interest was evidently less than in the morning and he did not strive to increase it. Her papers was too engrossing for him to mar it. He basked in her smiles and lent himself unreservedly to the pleasure of the moment. At the door of their own house they looked at each other and smiled.

"It is pleasant to get home," he cried.

"It is heaven," she faintly murmured. The house was not large, but it was exquisitely furnished. As they entered an atmosphere of ease and luxury enveloped them. He put his hand to them to part at the foot of the stairs.

A gentleman called—that very evening, I think, and affixed to his name on the card were the words, "pressing business."

They both saw him, he having sent for both, and after a word or two of introduction he told his errand in this wise.

"I have come," said he, "to ask Mrs. Cameron a very simple question." And turning to that lady he inquired the name of her dressmaker.

Had the ceiling above her suddenly bent and cared in Genevieve could not have looked more astonished and possibly not more terrified.

"Your pardon." this gentleman continued. "I am a stranger and, you probably think, I am. Let me explain myself. Dr. Cameron, you, if not your wife, doubtless remember the case of a young girl who died in a doctor's gig not long ago from a dose of prussic acid?"

Science Questions

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

WHEN the United States Government surveyors divided the land into townships and sections as the bounds of civilization moved ever onward toward the West, they had first to locate standard lines from which all possible accuracy. These lines marked by conspicuous were located with great precision by means of astronomical observations.

The standard meridians, lines due north and south, were determined by observing Polaris, the North Star, when above and below the true celestial pole. The poles of the celestial sphere are the exact points where the axis of the earth would be if extended out both ways to infinity. The extension of the north end of the axis of the earth into space is the absolute North. But this line or point as to it means. And every object in the entire universe moves, therefore if astronomers at great pains locate a base line in space, they find in a few years it will be useless because the equator and axis of the earth are in motion.

This mysterious motion completely upset the ancient Hindu, Babylonian, Assyrian, Arabian, Egyptian and Greek astronomers and temple and pyramid builders. They would locate, orientate their huge buildings and pyramidal structures with all the precision possible without telescopes and all would be well for a century or two. Then a north and south line through their building would no longer point toward the North Star. And a star that at the time of the building of his temples sent its ray at instant of rising into the centre of the eastern gates now did so no longer.

This fact had a profound effect on the hierophants of all antiquity. It was an insolvable mystery. A number of years ago I published a monograph on this fascinating subject, entitled "The Warning of the Light of Egypt." The Egyptian and Greek astronomers watched this magnetic motion of the equator and axis of the earth during centuries without securing a clew to its cause. None among the human race was able to even surmise the hidden cause until the mighty brain of Newton rose to supernal heights, discovered the true cause and explained it for all coming generations. The equator and axis of the earth move, and, of course, the entire solid globe has to move to displace these imaginary lines among the stars.

A CUTE AMERICAN

Mr. Perry L. Naish, in "The Rollings of a Moseless Stone," quotes the following anecdote, told of a "cute" American whom the author met in Chicago:

"It seems that one in England he had occasion to go to law with an English firm, and went to a good English solicitor to conduct his case for him. The solicitor told him that he thought he would probably win his case, but that much depended on who the judge was and in what mood he might be.

"'O,' said the American, 'I should say, then, that a present to the judge would be about the size of it.'

"The lawyer was horrified, and explained that the first of a Britisher offering a bribe to a judge would be perfectly fatal and would be sure to prejudice the judge against him.

"'You don't say!' said the man of dollars.

"The trial came up, the American won, and the lawyer came to him, saying:

"'Well, sir, I hope you are satisfied, and I don't think I managed badly.'

"'Right you are, sir,' said he. 'But I can't help thinking that case of champagne I sent the judge had something to do with it.'

"'You sent the judge a present!' gasped the lawyer.

"'Why, certainly,' he replied; 'after what you told me it seemed to be the only sensible thing, but, of course, I sent it from the other side!'"

Queer Laws About Women

By WINIFRED BLACK

"O H," cried the little boy, "Oh, the devil is whipping his wife."

"My," sighed the little girl, "my, wish his wife would get her turn a d whip him for a change, I'm sure he needs it."

I looked from the narrow window into the wide world and saw the little brown boy and the little rosy girl running to get in out of the rain, and the sun was shining gloriously at the same time; and then I knew what the little boy meant about the whipping.

I wonder if poor Mrs. Bad Man ever does get her turn and give that wicked husband of hers a good beating once in a while. Or does he live in North Carolina—and quiet she stand whatever he does without one whimper of protest?

North Carolina—don't you know about it? I didn't either, till I went there and then I found out. I saw a notice in the paper one day.

"Whereas," said the notice, "whereas, my wife, Mary So and So, has left my bed and board without my permission, I hereby petition all persons to refrain from giving aid, comfort or employment to said wife under extreme penalty of the law."

I laughed. What a mediaeval gloom I thought, "I wonder if he wears a cuirass and a helmet."

I spoke to a lawyer about it; he didn't laugh at all. "That must be a quaint law," said the lawyer. "They just a letter said he can do it—in this State."

"In what?" I spattered in amazement.

"Have you locked up or fined for for giving his runaway wife a cup of tea or asking her to stay all night, or giving her a floor to scrub, and paying her for it. That woman is Lost man's wife. She belongs to him like the rest of his live stock. If you find her running away, you must corral her and give her back. Just as you would old January, or Tiger—that's the law in North Carolina.

"That woman is that man's wife, she can't leave him, no matter what he does to her. She belongs to him just as his dog does, and if you befriend her you are 'enticing' her, and the law is strong against 'enticing' in this State.

And when I went to the station there were an crowds of women there trying to get out of the State.

Every time I see an old maid from North Carolina after this I am going to know that I am looking at a sensible woman.

Every time I look at a married woman from North Carolina I shall feel as if I were looking at a brazen sinner—and perhaps I shall be—who knows?

But here's Missouri—queer things the Missouri laws. I knew a woman down there who had a bad husband who beat her and abused here, but she stood it for the sake of her children.

One day the bad husband ran away and the wife went to work washing by the day, to keep a roof over the children's heads, and when she tried to make the husband keep her out with the rent, the law said "no, the woman is keeping a roof over those children's heads, she is giving them a meal a day, the man won't have to help," and he didn't, for that is the law of Missouri.

Skin deep, some civilization it seems to me.

Women have all the rights they need—what a silly cry that is. Did any class ever have its rights when any other class had all the say about it? Is there a man in this country who would be willing to let women make the laws governing him, without his having any voice at all?

Marriage is the protection of a woman, and the duty of a man," said a great, kind anti-suffragist the other day.

I asked her if she had observed that three-fifths of the divorces were obtained by women.

"Not so crazy for that kind of 'protection as they used to be, seems to me," said I wonder why."

And the nice, kind anti-suffragist was not logical and she said she was amazed ——— so bitter, but I wasn't amazed at all. I had just come from North Carolina by way of Missouri—that was all.

I wish I knew something definite about the laws concerning women in all of the other States—doesn't somebody know some statistics? They'd be so enlightening.

I'd love to know positively about that skin-deep business, and—I wonder if the little girl's funny wish will ever come true—anywhere—even in North Carolina.

TWO BIRDS—ONE STONE

Norah had arrived from Erin's Isle a week before, and was with difficulty being "broken to" to the routine of an English household. Cautiousness was not a very strong point with her, and her remarking, apart from "topsie," was hardly all that could be desired.

Dinner was just about to be served when there was a ratter along the hall, and the breathless Norah poked her head around the dining room door.

"Please, ma'am ——" she asked, "an' how will I be knowin' when the puddin' is done enough?"

"Stick a knife into it," said her mistress, with a resigned air. "If the knife comes out clean, the pudding is ready to serve."

"Yes, Ma'am" said Norah; "and I'd be after just testin' that a bottle over."

"And, oh, Norah!" ——For patience had an after thought—"If the knife does not come out clean, you might stick all the rest of the knives into the pudding.

UNRELIABLE EVIDENCE

"Please, mum, father's sent me round to say that your dog Towzer's killed three of his prize Cochinchinas this afternoon," announced an apple-faced youth to the elderly maiden lady, with corkscrew curls, a few doors away.

The lady held up her hands in horror ——"Towzer," she said, "couldn't do no such a thing, I'm certain. Go and tell your father that he must have made a mistake, my little man."

"But father saw him with one of the fowls in his mouth, ma'am."

"Tell your father circumstantial evidence has led many a wiser man astray," sniffed the lady. "Run away and go ask I tell you, now."

When the boy returned, three minutes later, he shrugged with an ear-to-ear smile.

"Father's compliments, mum, and p'raps you're right," he said. "He says I'm to tell you that circumstantial evidence would point to the fact that he shot your dog half an hour ago, but on second thoughts the matter he reckons no how you'd find the poor thing died o' housemaid's knee!"

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Dancing

BEAUTY must be a harmonious whole. In the figures of the dance one ungraceful step can mar the perfection of the rhythmical chorus one is trying to produce, in the physical rhythm of the human body, an ugly arm or hand can spoil the spell of loveliness.

The question I always ask myself is why, in a world where we are all under the sway of physical lure, do we so calmly accept our own imperfections and those of our children?

We work intelligently for evolution and growth in health and strength and brain-power; but beauty and grace we accept in the old superstitious fairy-tale fashion as the gift of the good fairies—and we fold our hands in the supposedly philosophical decision that either we have it or we have it not. Not at all! Either we have beauty or we set about getting it—if we have brains enough to acquire anything!

It is a simple thing to train the human body in the right way—the way it should go—in the beginning, but it is hard to alter bodily faults once they have come. However, if you have come to maturity without proper training in bodily grace and the health and ease and beauty it brings, do not despair—instead, dedicate thirty minutes morning and evening (—one hour out of your day) to the beautiful art of the dance, and soon your reward will be great not only in terms of the pleasure of pleasant, graceful movement, but in health, beauty and a gloriously symmetrical figure, too.

PROPER TRAINING

And make sure that your little children, and the dear young things all about you, have the proper beginnings to insure for them healthy and beautiful and graceful bodily growth.

Since an ugly arm or hand can so easily spoil the perfection of beauty, suppose, today, I show you how beautiful arms and hands may be evolved through proper training. It seems a far cry from dancing to beautiful arms and hands; but I shall try to show you how they may be gained by the rhythmical movement and exercise of the classical dance.

In most of the movements of the classical dance are executed with high-flexed arch and, the body's weight falling on the ball of the foot, while the instep is held in a firm high curve, they give of themselves a slender grace and power to the too-much-neglected foot, both of the exercises I give you today. The body must be poised lightly and springily upon the ball of the foot, inclining forward toward the toes. Walking and dancing thus will banish the flat-foot that seems to be a foe of modern high-heeled civilization.

The first picture shows one stage of a very wonderful arm exercise. Poise the weight on the balls of the feet, swaying slightly back and forward from toes to heels as the arms are raised with drooping wrists to shoulder height. When the arms are straight lines from the shoulder-sockets, raise the wrists and arms simultaneously until the backs of the hands just touch above the head.

A DANCING STEP

Now drop the arms slowly, with rhythmical muscular control, to the shoulder height again and turn the arms so the palms are alternately up and down parallel to the floor. Then, with palms down, sink the arms gradually to the sides, at the same time inclining the weight gradually to the entire foot. Practice this with gradually receding and increasing tempo, and finally do it as you walk forward on tiptoe, or as near as you can manage to this toe position.

The second picture is a little dancing step that can be practiced at a walking tempo until enough facility is gained to do it merrily and lightly as a dance. Advance on the ball of the feet with toes pointing outward. Incline the body forward in the line of the slight curve of the back. The arms swing up in gentle curves until the elbow is about at waist height.

As the weight is swaying to the forward left foot, swing the left arm out with its line a slight droop from elbow to wrist, and the right arm in, with the forearm curving up almost perpendicular to the ground and the hand drooping. Swing the arms in and out thus from side to side as the weight of the body springs from foot to foot. In all these arm exercises hold the hand relaxed from the wrist with light, pliant fingers, subtle fingers fairly close together, small and index fingers gently curved and relaxed with the index finger pointing up ever so slightly.

The faithful practice of these two exercises will register for you a distinct step toward the acquisition of poetically graceful arms and hands.

Their Married Life

Helen and Warren Meet Many American Art Students at a Quaint Latin Quarter Restaurant

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

MADAME JOUVEN'S is in the very heart of the Latin Quarter. It is a dingy building, with a faded, striped awning which shades the tables outside, and with low ceilinged rooms and sawdust floors within.

The small, round tables are placed so close that Madame Jouven and her three daughters, who serve you, can hardly squeeze through.

Although it was only half past six, every table on the terrace was taken.

"Oh, how quaint! Look, the walls are all covered with sketches," exclaimed Helen, as one of Madame Jouven's daughters led them inside.

"Quaint enough," grumbled Warren. "But I'm mighty skeptical about these places where they serve dinner for only two francs. That's too cheap. Something's wrong, something's wrong somewhere."

"But, Marion said all the art students came here—it must be all right. And everything looks clean."

"Well, art students may thrive on horse meat, but I don't want any of it in mine. Remember those shops with the gilded horse's heads? I'll wager these 'quaint little restaurants' are their prime customers.

"Don't, dear—don't spoil our dinner," pleaded Helen, glancing around for Marion, who had said they would find her there any night.

Warren had come almost reluctantly. He had been very unresponsive to Helen's enthusiastic account of the meeting with her old school friend.

"She'd be a blamed sight better off at home than living alone here in the Quarter," was his verdict, when Helen told him of Marion's studio and her independence.

Helen tried to make her cordiality cover Warren's lack of it. He had known Marion only slightly in the old school days, and now he was undoubtedly prejudiced against her work and her Bohemian life. Possibly Helen's admiration and enthusiasm increased this prejudice.

But Marion was too genuinely fond of Helen and too delighted to be with her to notice Warren's aloofness.

One of Madame Jouven's daughters now brought them each a plate on which was a sardine, two olives, one slice of tomato and two tiny radishes. In a two-course dinner the food must be served in very exact portions. She also brought three pint bottles of claret, with a dab of red wax over each cork.

"So we get a bottle of sealed wine with our two-franc dinner?"

"But it's very good wine," declared Marion, resenting Warren's sarcasm. "This is the finest two-franc dinner in Paris. Every student in the Quarter swears by Madame Jouven. Look at the testimonials of our gratitude," nodding to the pencilled sketches which covered the walls.

"Oh, I was going to ask you about those," interrupted Helen.

"Read that one back of you—the verses are in English."

Helen turned to a clever sketch of a French ballet girl, pirouetting on one toe. The verse underneath she read aloud:

"Twinkle, twinkle, little star.
Here's to keep you as you are.
Twinkle now, for you'll grow fat.
And stars don't twinkle after that!"

Even Warren grinned an appreciative, "That's not bad."

"Some of the best ones are on the other side," said Marion.

Every inch of the opposite wall was covered with drawings, most of them caricatures. Some of the verses were in French, some in English, and most of them screamingly funny.

MIMI

"Hello, what's that?" demanded Warren, looking under the table.

"Oh, that's Mimi," laughed Marion, dropping half her sardine on the sawdust floor for the big gray cat.

"Well I wish Mimi would claw the table's leg instead of mine."

"Oh, isn't she a beauty?" Helen leaned over to stroke her sleek fur. "We've got the most wonderful Persian cat—Pussy Purrnow. She's taken three rib-bons at the cat show, besides a special—"

"Oh, cut it," broke in Warren. "When Helen gets started on Pussy Purrnow you'd think we had the only cat that ever took a prize."

"He's just as proud of her as I am," teased Helen.

Here a crowd of eight students came in, nodded to Marion as they passed, and with an air of being quite at home, pushed two tables together, seated themselves, and began rearranging the silver.

They were all Americans who had evidently been long in the Quarter. Helen instantly noticed a marked resemblance in one of the men to a large cartoon on the side of the wall under which was scrawled "A Type."

He had the same closely trimmed Van Dyke beard, the same slouch hat, flowing tie and black velvet coat. He needed only the portmanteau under his arm to complete the picture.

"Yes, that's a caricature he drew of himself," smiled Marion, noticing Helen's chase of comparison. "He's very clever, but he's too busy to work. His folks live somewhere in Michigan, I believe they're well-off, and occasionally he gets a check from home. The one next to him is Paul Colonorce—he had a picture in the Salon last year. The girl he's with is Elsie Chirpsel—she does miniatures."

The man with the Van Dyke beard went over to a shelf on which were a dozen or more napkins in varied colored rings.

"Get mine! Get mine!" clamored the others, catching them dexterously as he tossed them over.

GENIALITY

"Here's yours, Marion. Want it?" holding it up, poised to throw.

Marion laughed and shook her head. "No, I'm company tonight, so I'm flaunting a fresh one."

"Oh, all right," with a comic drawl as he put back the napkin.

Two of the other men had gone after the cutlery, plates, pitchers and bread, which with noisy merriment they distributed around their long table.

"Oh, yes, when it's crowded here we often wait on ourselves," smiled Marion. "And we all have our napkin rings—it saves Madame a lot of laundry."

Helen was beginning to feel the charm of it all, and even Warren unbent somewhat in this atmosphere of geniality and good fellowship.

As the dinner consisted only of relishes, soup, fish, chicken, salad and cheese, the possibility of horse meat was eliminated.

Marion suggested that they take their coffee and liqueur out to one of the now vacant tables on the terrace. Everyone was having a cordial, for a dinner in Paris, however inexpensive, is not complete without a cognac, anisette, menthe, or grenadine.

The group of American students at the long table grew more merry. Every now and then they broke into a chorus of some popular song, beating time on the table with their glasses. Almost everyone had finished his dinner, but they all still lingered on. Some were playing checkers, others had pushed aside their coffee cups and were writing letters. The checkers and the well-worn portfolios with the notepaper and pink blotters were supplied by Madame.

These Latin Quarter restaurants are not merely places to eat, but they contribute much to the social life of the student.

A little old woman, bent and shrivelled, now appeared in the street before the terrace and began to sing in a piping voice. Between the verses she executed a fluttering pas seul.

OLD MARIE

"That's old Marie. She used to be a famous dancer at the opera."

Several of students who had evidently dined somewhere else now came to have a cordial and a chat at Madame Jouven's. Every one seemed to know every one else.

Just after paying before they left, Marion insisted on their coming to her studio, where they will be in the fate of the old garden, but to Helen's disappointment Warren refused rather curtly to go up.

"Dear, I'm afraid Marion was hurt," as they turned back into the Boulevard St. Michael.

"Well, she'd no business to insist. She saw I didn't want to go. I've had enough Bohemianism for one night. Where's that underground station we saw on the way down?"

"Oh, Warren, we're not going back in the underground?"

"Why not?"

"After dinner in the Latin Quarter—to take the underground? We might as well be in the subway at home. It would spoil the atmosphere of the whole evening!"

"Atmosphere be banged! Should think Jone fellows'd be glad to get back to less atmosphere and more civilization. There is no other thing so easy as the man who hath just slipped his wife's leading string.

7.—Boast not thyself that thou lookest like a bachelor, for lo, matrimony doth put its seal upon a man. Yea, he is branded as though he wore a ring through his nose, and his estate proclaimeth itself from afar.

8. Nor shalt thou boast thyself of thy freedom, for the time cometh when thou canst not find a clean shirt, nor a collar, though thou soughtest for one with a search warrant. Neither canst thou track down thy sox to the lair where they have ridden themselves. Furthermore, thy stomach shall rise against the cooking of cafes, and at that hour thou wilt arise and hasty to the telegraph office and summon back thy keeper. Yea, and thou shalt rejoice in thy fetters.

9. If thy wife tarryeth sojorning at the Summer resort, and if she holdeth thee up for much money and then desirest her to return to thine abode, and to perform again upon thy gas range, write not to her demanding forthwith her presence. Nay, be thou wily even as the fox, and say unto her, "Hurry not home, but remain where thou art until the Winter season cometh," and lo, she shall take the next train back to see why thou art so willing, and perchance to find out HER name.

10. Before thy wife returneth dire one to set thy house in order, yea, to pick up the poker cabs, and to bear away the bottles, and to remove the cigar stubs from the best furniture, lest thy wife, finding the house like a pig sty, shall say unto thee, "Lo, I will never leave thee again, for all of my neat-and-close mahogany furniture is ruined," and so thou shalt miss the life of the Summer Widower, which is short and fleeting, but full of gluee.

The Ten Commandments of the Summer Widower

By DOROTHY DIX

SAY "I SHALL BE DESOLATE."

1. Dissemble thy gladness, put ashes upon thine head and rend thy garments with sorrow when thy wife sayeth unto thee, "Lo, it breaketh my heart to go away and leave thee alone in the hot city, but for the sake of the health of our children I must offer myself up as a sacrifice and go to a Summer resort."

2. Say unto her, "Behold I shall be desolate without thee, but who am I that I should stand between thee and thy duty as a Mother? Therefore, go hence, even as thou hast said, but wherewithal shall I be comforted when the Light of My Life hath fled?"

3. Give orders to thy stenographer that she shall write words of sorrow and of grief each day to thy wife, telling her how empty the city is without her, and how thou spendest the evenings thinking of her and mourning because she is not, but that thou rejoicest because she is not in the town that soucheth even as an oven. For it addeth to the pleasure to a wife if she believeth that her husband suffereth while she is away.

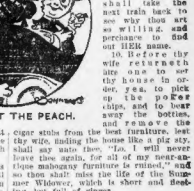
4. When thou assassinest thy friends and sayest to them, "Come, and we will play poker and drink beer and look upon the highball when it bulketh, for my wife is in the country, hurray, hurray," go slow, yea, go even as the tortoise goes, for behold the more out in trailing to fler with the bunch, and they shall despoil thee and rob thee of thy pelf, and thy head the next morning shall ache with a great and exceeding ache.

5. Invite not the gorsch whom thou meetest on the roof garden to spin forth with thee, for lo thou shalt meet up with the friend of thy wife, and she will say to thee, "I shall write to thy wife and tell her that I met thee and thy lady friend, and she will be SO PLEASED that thou art not moping over the desk all day, for she sayeth that thou workest too hard."

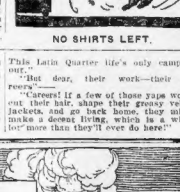
6. When thou takest the cool of an evening on an excursion boat, or when thou goest forth to a Summer garden hold thine eyes steadily before thee, and look not to the right nor to the left, lest thou be ensnared by the maidens who garner in the Summer widowers, for, behold, this Latin Quarter life's only camping out."

"But dear, their work—their careers"—

"Careers! If a few of those yaps would cut their hair, shape their greasy velvet jackets, and go back home, they might make a decent living, which is a whole lot more than they'll ever do here!"



INVITE NOT THE PEACH.



NO SHIRTS LEFT.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE Sisters of Song calm up to the house aggenn last nite. Wen they calm in the front door Pa got kind of pale, like a man wich is see-sick, but he tried to be nice to them beekaus they are Ma's friends.

Oh, there is that darling husband of yures, sed Missus Jenkins. She was a awful fat, boomly woman, & I dont think she was very yung, but she kep all the time giggling. Dear me, she sed to Ma, I wish I cud have a husband like that, a deer, nonied man that is all the time rite ware you know ware he is, you an going to sing it now, sed Missus Jenkins, & if you will turn over the leeves of musick I will git a chanse to sing it rite at you.

Then Pa looked verey paler than before, & it took him quite a while to get up, but he went over to the piano & turned the musick for Missus Jenkins. I took down all the words, I thought that was awful poer & so did Pa, this is the words:

The shades of nite is softly falling,
Over you, luv, & me, luv,
It almost maiks me feel like hawling
To think our lives must be apart,
Dear hart.

The daybrake cums, but brings moar sorrow,
To you, luv, & me, luv,
I kip fer another morrow
With you across the way from me,
It should not be.

Missus Jenkins sang the first part ef the song kind of loud so all of us cud heer plain, but she sang the last part low & soft & looked at Pa so tender that for a minit she looked almost pritty.

That is sum song, sed Pa. You sing it with grate feeling. How did it ever happen that we got so far apart on life's way? sed Pa.

I dont like that number very well, deer, sed Ma to Missus Jenkins. It is bunful in its wording. Ma sed, but I gess is no use of a woman feeling bad last beekaus she can't be fortunate enuff to marry a nodel man like my husband.

Then all of the Sisters of Song sed at onst: We wuddent marry enny boy band if he was the last man in the world, & then they all went hoam.

Going Down

"This high cost of living problem is getting to be something terrible," observed Mrs. Nutley. "Everything is getting higher."

"Oh, I don't know," replied her husband soothingly. "There's one option of me, for instance, and my opinion of you, and our mutual opinion of our neighbors, and the neighbors' opinion of both of us."

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROES, Financial Editor.

Stocks worked lower this morning after opening with a receding tendency. Price changes in the local market were few at the opening and for awhile afterwards. At the end of an hour there was more range and it was downward.

Boston & Maine declined one point and United Fruit two. New Haven, which had closed a little below par yesterday, lost ¼ this morning. Most mines in which there was business declined fractionally. Granby made a trifling gain.

Steel was a weak feature in New York, selling below 62. By 11 o'clock it was quoted at just that figure, being off 1. Union Pacific was down ¾. Southern Pacific had shaded. Among other declines were Chesapeake & Ohio ½, Reading ¾, Lehigh Valley 1, American Can ¼, Amalgamated ½, American Locomotive ⅝, Westinghouse ½ and Erie ⅛.

Share transactions for the first hour did not total 40,000.

Receded at the Start.

Early recessions were the feature of the New York market and it opened weaker. But declines were most pronounced in regard to shares of a few equipment corporations, including American Locomotive and American Car and Foundry. Transactions were small in these issues, however. Generally speaking, a whole was uninteresting at the beginning of trading and the tone was quiet.

Among the declines were Amalgamated ½, American Car & Foundry ½, American Telegraph & Telephone ½, Chesapeake & Ohio ½, China ⅝, Erie ⅛, Reading ⅜, Southern Pacific ¾, Union Pacific ⅛, Steel common ⅝ and Utah Copper ⅝.

Republic Iron & Steel made a slight fractional gain. Missouri Pacific, after opening unchanged, ranged slightly higher.

The curb was steady. Americans in London were narrow and featureless, pending definite action in the Mexican situation.

Fail to Amend Currency Bill.

Those the Democrats who seek to amend the administration currency bill have signally failed, and there is reason to believe that it will pass the House without any change that will suit radicals. If there is any amending it will have to be approved of by President Wilson. There was hope in Republican circles that the Bill would be blocked in the Senate and nothing done this session after it was enacted, but that Senator Owen, whose name is attached to the measure, would oppose it, and offer a new bill of his own.

But after Mr. Owen had talked with President Wilson he denied he was opposed to the bill which the committee he is chairman of had reported. "I expect to do my utmost to pass it," he said.

Some members of the House had not been influenced much by the President's wishes. Representative Wingo is still fearless and fighting. He says that if the caucus votes down the interlocking directorate prohibition amendment, it would furnish the Republicans with campaign material for a charge that the Democratic party had surrendered to Cleveland H. Dodge and Cyrus McCormick, who had made heavy contributions to the Wilson campaign fund.

Will Learn What Bankers Think.

The public will learn just what bankers think of the measure when the American Bankers' Association gets through considering it. That body is assembling in Chicago to attend the conference called for consideration of the measure. An interesting statement is made by Colonel Frederick E. Farnsworth, secretary of the association. He said:

"I hazard the statement that of all the 29,000 banks in this country not one is in favor of the enactment of this bill as it now stands. The point of opposition on which all bankers seem to agree is the proposal to place the control and administration of the banking system in the hands of a political board."

Why the Dividend Was Reduced.

Stock speculators had discounted the reduction of the Chesapeake & Ohio dividend and nobody was surprised when the directorate set the rate at 4 per cent. per annum basis. The cut came after the Hocking Valley Road, a subsidiary, had gone from 7 to as 9 per cent. basis. Flood, the coal strike and some other events reduced Chesapeake & Ohio earnings for the last fiscal year about 1¼ per cent. For th stwelve months ended by June they were equal to 6.33 per cent. on the stock. For the previous year earnings had been 6.50. While gross income showed a slight increase, net decreased nearly $1,000,000. Chairman Frank Trumbell said after the dividend cut had been made:

"Directors consider the 4 per cent. dividend to be conservative. The outlook for this year is for earnings equal to about 7 per cent. on the stock.

"The company now has 6,100 stockholders, an increase of 1,000 in the last three months, and many own small amounts. The number is also five times that when Edwin Hawley bought into the property.

"Recent financing through the sale of notes will carry the Chesapeake & Ohio through to the end of this year."

Mexico After Money.

It has been said that the chief trouble with the present government of Mexico in its efforts to maintain itself is lack of funds and it has been making a desperate attempts to place a loan in Europe. Recognition by the United States would give the government a standing that it it badly needs, as a borrower. There was a report yesterday that President Huerta had got a provisional promise from French bankers to float a new loan of $20,000,000, but diligent investigation in Paris failed to discover anything upon which the story could be based. The French Foreign Office would not advise any such investment by Frenchmen as long as the United States refuses to recognize the Huerta administration.

Parisian bankers and speculators are deeply interested in the outcome of the negotiations going on between the Wilson administration and Mexico. The general situation in this country, in fact, is a large factor on the Paris bourse. Speculators there want to know, among other things, how badly the drought damaged American crops. The stock market has been dull and narrow there for some weeks.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market was fairly steady at the start, but spot and futures were each 3s 9d lower.

More selling of electrolytic for 16 cents a pound is reported. It is said that offerings of small lots at 15¾ was a move by a bear clique, and that in transactions at the latter figure delivery would be most uncertain. Regarding the metal situation, the New York Sun says: "It is apparent that any amount of spot copper could find a ready market at a good premium, but in other words, that refineries have been doing their utmost to fill requirements and silencer possible to anticipate deliveries. Conditions are such, however, that it has become an impossibility for producers to push to rush forward copper ahead of date specified in purchase contracts."

Financial News in Brief.

The net operating re cause of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company for the quarter ended with June was $4,662,936, compared with $5,-759,724 for the corresponding period last year. Total operating revenue was $16,-857,799 for that quarter this year and $16,761,688 for the same in 1912. Total operating expenses showed a comparative increase of $1,223,830.

The New York Stock Exchange will be closed August 30, and the governing committee of the Boston Stock Exchange has taken the same action. The day is the Saturday before Labor Day.

For June last Wabash road gross earnings increased $167,119 and net $184,-101. For the fiscal year the gain in gross was $3,414,522 and in net $1,-871,517.

Better buying of steel products is reported and an extensive movement along this line is expected next month. Wire and other prices have been cut and a reduction in plates and billets is looked for.

GIRLS RUSH TO ENTER BIG SWIM CARNIVAL

Return to
Editor of Swimming Carnival,
Boston American,
80 Summer St., Boston.

Miss Doris Shacker, fourteen, of Greystone, R. I., is the first girl to enter her name as a participant in the AMERICAN'S swimming carnival, to be held in the Charles River Basin on Saturday, August 30, from 2 to 6 p. m.

Next comes Bella Goodman, thirteen, of No. 26 Dolphin street, Beachmont, and Mildred K. Wyman, fourteen, of No. 27 Bowker street, Brookline. Miss Wyman writes:

I am fourteen years old, a member of the Brookline Gymnasium A. A., and although I have never yet competed in any of the AMERICAN'S races, I have won many medals and trophies at local pools, and hope to be the possessor of some token offered by the AMERICAN before long.

The following girls from Tenean Beach, Neponset, swimming pupils of Superintendent Charles A. Sullivan, have signified their intention of taking part:

Many Girls Enter.

Lillian Goodwin, fifteen, No. 367 Freeport street, Neponset.

Louise Fay, seventeen, No. 34 Tenean street, Neponset.

Ellen Johnson, thirteen, No. 19 Erickson street, Neponset.

Mary E. Cummings, twelve, No. 140 Walnut street, Neponset.

Margaret Flanagan, twelve, No. 4 Minot place, Neponset.

Annie Hurley, sixteen, No. 129 Walnut street, Neponset.

Ruth Calkins, nine, No. 1841 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester.

Alice Hurley, ten, No. 15 Bertram street, Neponset.

Mary Hurley, eighteen, No. 15 Bertram street, Neponset.

Hazel Bridges, thirteen, No. 116 King street, Dorchester.

Estelle Flood, fifteen, No. 392 Freeport street, Neponset.

Rita Foley, eighteen, No. 181 Prescott street, East Boston.

Margaret Sarak, eighteen, No. 35 Saratoga street, East Boston.

Big Interest Shown.

Instructor Joseph Good of the Curtis Hall swimming pool expects to enroll a class of forty girls in the carnival, including Gladys Carah, eighteen, of Holbrook street, Jamaica Plain, and Gretchen Ekhorn, eighteen, of Newsome Park, who recently swam from the Charlestown bridge to Long Island.

Instructor William Murray of Wollaston Beach says he will enter several girls who will make the girls from Revere, Winthrop or any other beach hurry to catch up with them.

There is tremendous interest in the carnival, not only on the part of the swimmers, but the public. Last year 100,000 persons watched the races.

The entrance for these races is free. All a girl has to do is to fill out the coupon and secure it to the Editor of the Swimming Carnival, Boston AMERICAN, and she will become entered in the big event. The distance will be one mile. The AMERICAN is desirous of having every girl swimmer, who are swimming daily around Boston, enter this contest. The race will be handled by a corps of experts. Some of the best lifesavers in the country will be on hand to care for the swimmers. Medical attendants and nurses will be present.

The course is one of the best that can be found, and affords an excellent opportunity for the friends of contestants to witness the race for the entire distance along the Esplanade. The start will be near the Union Boat Club float. If the day selected, August 30, should be stormy, the race will be carried over to September 6, at the same hour and same place.

REP. JOHN J. DOUGLAS OF EAST BOSTON.

This is a Democratic member of the Legislature who proved himself a faithful adherent of the New Haven Railroad's views in the most important matter before the Legislature this year. In spite of the warnings of the Railroad Commission, the Tax Commissioner, the Public Franchise League and the Chamber of Commerce, in spite of the denunciation of the bill by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and in spite of the veto of the Democratic Governor, Mr. Douglas voted for the Western Trolley Merger Bill which gave the railroad monopoly control over more than half the street railways in the State.

This is the bill about which the Democratic party had said in its last platform "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS, AND BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THE COMMONWEALTH.

Yet Mr. Douglas by his vote placed the interest of the railroad above this solemn pledge of his party to the people.

If you think that this man ought to be retired into private life, please send us your name and address. We shall not publish it.

If he tells you that he did it for friendship, laugh at him, because it is laughable.

Locomotive Trust Quits Auto Business

"Alco" Cars and Trucks Have Been Sold at Loss for Years.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The American Locomotive Company has decided to give up the manufacture and sale of automobiles and motor trucks. It has been in this business seven years, making the Alco cars in a big plant at Providence, R. I.

Automobile men say that the cars have been sold at a loss, despite the high prices obtained for them, on account of the remote location of its plant, the cost of raw material to Providence and delay in making deliveries.

The company has sold $6,000,000 invested in its Providence plant, its New York city building, a $100,000 service plant at Long Island City, a $112,000 one in Chicago and a Pacific Coast station figuring $175,000. The company assures all Alco car owners that its guarantees will be fulfilled and repair parts will be obtainable for five years.

The company obtained $6,000 for its pleasure cars. But 85 per cent. of its business was in motor trucks and taxis. It has made more taxis than any other concern in the country. It also has the distinction of being the only auto to win the Vanderbilt Cup twice (1909 and 1910.)

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Perhaps no set of men have more to do with the handling of traffic than do the members of the Metropolitan Park police, and especially those detailed for duty at Revere and Nantasket beaches.

At the former place the work of the park police is really wonderful. The way they handle the crowds that come during the rush hours of the evening and holidays is cause for a great deal of gratification to visitors from other cities as well as from those who know what it means to handle crowds such as frequent these resorts during the heated season.

Chief West has certainly educated his men to perform their work in a speed and thoroughness and without any undue stage effect. The system in vogue is one that could be copied and improved, and one that it is necessary to see to be appreciated.

On Tuesday nights—the evening on which a display of fireworks is made along the beach front—the roadway is generally covered with people of all kinds, while the sidewalks, and especially in the vicinity of the exhibition point, is crowded to overflowing. It is at the conclusion of the fireworks exhibition that the police show their real ability, for they clear the roadways and sidewalks of thousands upon thousands of people without the slightest difficulty.

In talking with one of these gray-coated officers the other day, he said: "The street traffic is not the handling the automobile traffic, for as a rule the motorists are ever watchful and instantly obey the signs given by us. They appreciate that we are looking after their interest and their safety. Occasionally, of course, we meet some driver or other who thinks he is more important than are the police, but it does not take long to convince him of the errors of his way.

"The greatest difficulty we have is with foot passengers and when the stop signal has been given for the passage of motor vehicles will seemingly deliberately rush between them. Then, again, when we stop the automobile traffic it seems three or four minutes before pedestrian crossers realize that the road-way, and they never seem to fully appreciate the importance of watching for and following the signals of the police officers.

"The pedestrians are our greatest trouble, but in time we hope to get them educated in much the same proficient manner that we have the motorists."

Frank E. Wing, the local distributor for the Maxwell car, has returned from an extensive trip through the West, in which he drove his 1914 Marmon something like 4,000 miles and experienced not the slightest difficulty. He and his family enjoyed the trip West and he has again returned to the active business circles.

President Lewis R. Speare, of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association, is on a pleasure trip through Canada, giving the natives an example of the workings of the Stearns-Knight car. Mr. Speare is due to return to Boston the early part of next week.

No Refuge for Thaw in Canada

However clever were Harry K. Thaw's friends in piloting him through the lines of hopeful sheriffs in Connecticut and New Hampshire, after lightning work between Matteawan and the New York State line, they were assuredly ill-advised to let him get into Canada. Of all countries in the world, Canada offers the least security to strangers with unpleasant chapters in their histories. The Dominion has a cold way of looking at these things, that, to a suspect, must appear exceedingly inhospitable.

In the first place, the Canadian courts have absorbed from the present British tradition an appalling contempt for technicalities. Any one who has ever watched criminal trials of the present day in England must have been impressed with the brusque attitude of judges to phrase-juggling or efforts to translate words into some meaning other than what might be called their "horse sense." Barristers even hesitate to chance the snub of "his ludship" by advancing a technical objection, unless it be unusually clever and subtle, in which case the court may, after a few brief, keen-witted sallies, leave it to the jury, with a shrug, as much as to say: "You gentlemen of common sense are, of course, not going to take such mental gymnastics into consideration."

This reaction from a too technical period, when a misspelled name or word by an ill-fed engrosser could almost upset an indictment, has had its effect on Canadian practice. We recall the cases of Greene and Gaynor after the Captain Carter-Savannah harbor scandal. In these the defendants, refugees entrenched with unlimited money in a luxurious hotel in Quebec, fought with the aid of the most astute legal talent for months, right through all the Canadian courts to the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council in London, only to be landed back ignominiously in the United States for trial and sentence.

Apart from this, Thaw was ill-advised to cross the Dominion frontier, for the reason that Canada has an immigration law under which its Department of Immigration can deport him almost at will. "Undesirable citizens" cannot enter Canada as a place of refuge or residence. Jack Johnson, the pugilist, only escaped the clutches of this law by having in his possession a through ticket from Chicago to Havre, France, which had been actually purchased in Chicago and was convincing evidence of his bona fide intention to seek neither refuge nor residence in Canada. The criminal offence of which he had been convicted in Illinois was not an extraditable offence, the Mann White Slave Act having been passed long after the extradition treaty had been negotiated. Even at that, the Canadian immigration authorities never lost sight of him until he left the country on a steamship. Nor did he then take a chance on landing at any British port.

So broad is the scope of the Canadian immigration law that the officers of the department may be said to have the power to deport almost without reason, just as in old days in the West there were sheriffs who would order "tin horns" beyond what they ambitiously called the "city limits" because they had taken a sudden dislike to the color of their eyes.

Harry Thaw would have been better off had he stayed in New England or fled to Pennsylvania than Canada. A foreign flag is not necessarily a friendly flag in such a case as his. From all accounts, too, he might now have been well off to Paris or Peru or the unrecognized Mexico had he only kept his mouth shut at a critical moment in his six-cylinder career.

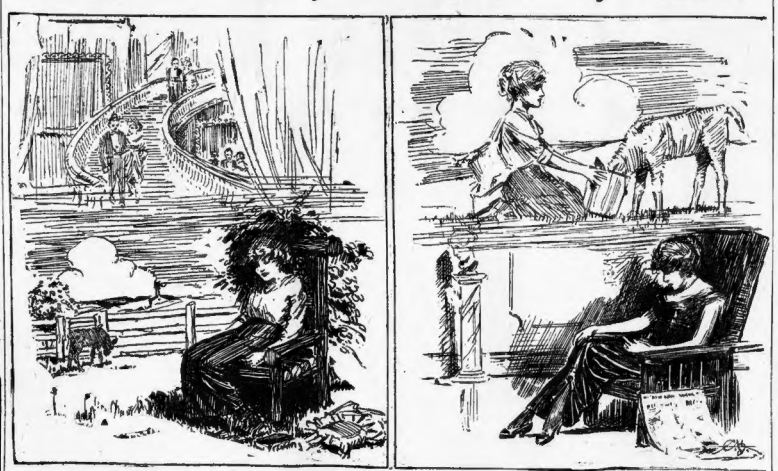
Dreams—The Country Girl's and the City Woman's



Walk Slowly, Keep Your Temper, Trust in Divine Justice----

And, Like Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, You Will Stand the Heat Well.

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

The weather is about what it always has been at this time of year—do not get excited about it.

Don't get excited about anything if you can help it.

Remember that excitement makes the heart beat, and the heart beating faster makes you hotter, more tired, less able to stand the heat.

Remember that the most wonderful thing in nature is the fact that man living on the crust of this earth, with melted stone and metals under his feet, and absolute zero in the atmosphere a few miles above him, IS ABLE TO KEEP THE TEMPERATURE INSIDE OF HIS OWN BODY IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF NINETY-EIGHT YEAR IN AND YEAR OUT, SUMMER AND WINTER.

Sometimes it is a hundred degrees in the shade. And sometimes explorers at the North Pole find the temperature forty degrees below zero and more.

But always that wonderful machine inside of the body keeps the blood and the tissues of the body at a temperature just below one hundred degrees.

If the temperature goes up five or six degrees you die. And if it goes down a few degrees you are dead.

With heat inconceivable below our feet, occasionally spouting out through the tops of volcanoes, and with cold we cannot even imagine in the empty space above our heads just outside our warm, damp atmosphere, we little earthly microbes live, miraculously kept forever at just the temperature that we need.

Think of yourself as a wonderful machine, planned by Nature, with your extraordinary vasco-motor system always working and your heart and your nerves more wonderful than any machine.

Make up your mind to use your brain to help that machine to keep the temperature at the right point.

In hot weather, so called, begin first of all by remembering that it is much hotter somewhere else.

Remember also that others suffer as you do not suffer.

We are such selfish animals that it makes us cool at once to think of someody or to see somebody a great deal hotter.

Some genius has written a beautiful poem about Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, the three distinguished gentlemen who walked up and down in the fiery furnace.

Take those gentlemen as models in these days.

Do not hurry—they walked up and down in the furnace very slowly, showing off and proving that there was something in what they had said about their particular religious belief.

Do not get angry, do not curse, do not drink strong drinks—Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego used no strong language and drank no whiskey while in the fiery furnace. If they had done either they would probably have been handed down to history as a small shovelful of ashes instead of being handed down as very great heroes.

Walking slowly when you can do so just as well as not is very important. Forget for the moment that you are the hustling citizen of a bustling community, give yourself extra time to catch your train, to get to your office, to get dressed; move slowly; LET THE HEART REST IN HOT WEATHER.

And above all things, don't deceive yourself with the idea that one OUGHT NOT TO WORK IN HOT WEATHER.

Hot weather is just the time for work, if you work sensibly and take care of yourself sensibly.

Drink water not too cold, plenty of it. A lump of sugar in a glass of water, or a little lemon juice, is better than pure water.

Wear everything light AND LOOSE.

Nothing tight around your neck. A tight collar is as harmful in hot weather as would be a hot water bag at your feet.

Circulation of the blood inside of your body is as important as circulation of the air around the outside.

Have your collar loose, your clothing loose.

Don't have a tight belt around your waist. If you happen to be thin and can hang the belt on the bones of your hips, all right. Then wear a belt.

But if you are the average American business man, with the back of your head sticking out to show energy and the front of your stomach sticking out to show foolish living, DON'T TRY TO STRAP A BELT AROUND THAT POOR STOMACH SO TIGHTLY AS TO HOLD UP YOUR TROUSERS. You can't do it without hurting everything inside of the stomach. And YOU ARE THE STUFF INSIDE OF THAT STOMACH.

Think slowly, talk slowly, move slowly. Open all the windows. Don't be afraid of a draught.

Bathe twice a day if you can and once a day anyhow.

Think of the negro in the Gaboon region who is standing a temperature of 140; think of the seal and walrus at the North Pole on a block of ice.

Keep your temper and you will keep your health. Don't let the sun strike your bare head.

Keep the sunlight away from the baby, especially out of its eyes.

DOUBT

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THERE is a devil and his name is Doubt;
The country and the city know him well.
He makes each human mind his citadel
And many an honest aim he puts to rout.
He argues well, about it and about—
He kills more love than any tongue can tell;
He leads obedient mortals to his hell
And mocks them when they seek a pathway out.

You do not know him, yet you doubt your friend;
You sneer at him, but doubt a mother's love.
He camps upon your trail until the end,
As smooth as silk, as fluttering as a dove.
In every brain he builds his little fires—
He is the trustiest devil Satan hires.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox SAYS

It's a Better World Than 25 Years Ago—The Improvements That Have Come Are Almost Beyond Man's Belief

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

OVER in London a certain periodical celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary not long ago.

The editor asked many people to say wherein they thought the world had improved in that quarter of a century.

It seemed an easy question to answer.

Improvement in World In Twenty-five Years Beyond Belief

The improvements in the world in twenty-five years have been almost beyond the belief of man.

We all know how many wonderful inventions have come into use in that period of time.

Most of us consider these inventions improvements, because they are conveniences and provide for human comfort. A few old-fashioned types of mind regard them as hindrances to mental and moral development leading to sloth and idleness and lack of physical prowess.

But while the elevators which lift us upstairs do not develop the leg muscles, and while the harvesters and binders and vacuum cleaners do not develop the arm muscles, and while the automobiles and airships prevent us from walking as our ancestors walked, yet all these modern inventions are waking new cells in the human brain and giving the race greater opportunities to explore the wonderful realms of mind and spirit, which hold secrets unsuspected by the world at large; secreats which shall yet be revealed to the patient student and which shall revolutionize science and medicine and religion.

Now that the drudgery of the earth is being done by machinery and that time and distance are made as nothing by motor power, all these discoveries are becoming more and more possible, and the hour of their revealment is coming nearer and nearer.

In the last twenty-five years all this talk of peace and disarmament has come to be heard.

War is still rampant, yet twenty-five years ago such a thing as a great Peace Congress would have seemed too ridiculous to deserve more than a ripple of amused comment.

Now it is a GREAT FACT.

And this congress is composed of many of the most brilliant men and women of the century.

Religion has broadened and grown in this period of time amazingly. There was a strong wave of materialism a quarter of a century ago.

It was the wash on the shores from the passing of the ship of Bigotry.

Now that wave has subsided, and the ship of Larger Faith is sailing the high seas.

Many Evils Are Worse, But Crisis Is Near; Change Will Come

Many evils have grown worse in twenty-five years.

Just as a fever grows worse till the crisis and then subsides.

So even in the intensified aspect of these evils there is a betterment of the world in general; for the crisis is near and the change will come.

THE BROADER WAY

Lord, in this quarter of a hundred years
What mighty progress in Thy world appears!
Though strife and loud dissensions do not cease,
Yet louder still is this great talk of peace.

Red war exists, but stands in ill repute.
Were Homer back among us with his lute
He could not, and he would not, sing of war;
For Peace is what the world is craving for.

Lord, in this quarter of a century
How man has grown in consciousness of Thee!
Though not by dogmas or by creeds enticed,
Each earnest soul looks IN, and finds its Christ.

Spurning old narrow paths, men's feet have trod
In larger ways, and found the larger God.
Now Thy great truth is dimly understood—
Religion lies in loving brotherhood
